HOLIDAY SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

College Class In 2044 Looks Back At What Happened In The Election Of 2000

By Dan Rattiner

The students settled in their seats. The bell rang.

"Okay, students, we will pick up where we left off on Monday," Dr. Fassmeier said, "which is with the American Election of 2000. What is this election called? Anybody?"

"It was called the Fall On His Sword Election," Janet Peabody said.

"Correct," said Fassmeier. "And why do we call it that?"

"Because the day before the Bush Inauguration, Albert Gore literally fell on his sword."

"Yes he did. A sword he got from the Smithsonian. George Washington's sword. A symbolic gesture. And though there was a lot of blood, it was just a flesh wound. You see, Albert Gore was from the Old School. He believed in One Man One Vote and Truth and Fairness and the American Way. Unlike George W. Bush who was a rough small town politician. And who stole Florida.

"And that was the problem. Gore never did understand the basic tenets of the American system beginning in the late Twentieth Century which, as we know today, is that everything is a movie. Entertainment. An hour and a half of this and an hour an a half of that. First there is the Election Movie. And then we have the whatever's next movie. This one went on and on. It was supposed to be over on the morning of November 8. They would announce the winner. And they would move on to The Choosing of the Cabinet Movie which would end with the inauguration in January.

"Gore never did understand the basic tenets of the American system... that everything is entertainment."

"Instead, the election just kept going. And after awhile it got so boring and repetitive that the audience got up and walked out. It was like an Ingmar Bergman film – Bergman was that great end of Twentieth Century Swedish filmmaker – that should have ended but just kept on. Everybody knew how it would end. It was considered a chic and intellectual thing when it first came out to watch it all the way through. Not now.

"In the case of the election, everybody knew that Bush stole Florida. There was that business — it all came out later — where the month before the election President Bush's brother Jeb, seeing it was going to be close, took all the punch hole voting machines up to a high school gym in Tallahassee and raced them. Those that rejected the greatest percentage of ballots he put in the Democratic counties, those that rejected just a few ballots be put in the Republican counties.

"And that's how they stole the election. Nifty, no? They knew their lawyers could skunk a re-count. And so the movie was over. The bad guys won. Things like that happen in the movies.

"The people just wanted to move on to the Choosing of the Cabinet. And so they just stopped paying attention to Mr. Gore, who just kept making speech after speech, interrupting, among other things, as you know, the Western Division Championship Game for the NFL Title between

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Tommy Hilfiger, who is an elusive Hamptonite, only appearing once or twice during the hot summer season, may be contacting his friends a little more frequently this week. Is it the holiday spirit he is feeling? No, unfortunately his cell phone is missing with all those celeb friends listed on speed dialing. Makes you think twice about putting your friends on speed dial.

Hate to see or hear it end. Tina Turner, "Back to the Sea Concert" alumni, is hanging up her spike heels and putting that incredible voice on hold. For those of us who remember that 1994 concert at Southampton College, the memories are etched in our dancing shoes. Come back one more time!

This was and is "the party" of the millennium. Celebs were so packed in that we found ourselves squeezed next to Woody Allen watching Samuel Jackson and John Travolta speaking to each other in inaudible whispers. Nicolas Cage was so awe struck he just stood there speechless. Even Steven Spielberg couldn't find the right words. Okay, okay...this is where we give you the biggest scoop in New York (even Liz Smith didn't say a sentence when she saw us). It is a party that goes on all day and night every day of the week. We urge you to treat yourselves (ask the kiddies) to Madame Tussaud's, the brand new wax museum in New York. It is so mind-blowing and spooky, a must see for holiday fun. But where was Dan Rattiner's wax counterpart?

Rosie O'Donnell, a super positive force in charity work out here (seen and not seen) is getting a lot of bad press in the supermarket tabloids. We say, "give it a rest"! Guaranteed if the microscope was turned on any of us, some narrow-minded people would find something to be upset about. This wonderful lady has a new magazine coming out (a la Martha Stewart) for average folks. Best wishes for success.

We hope you have the early works of Peter Beard around the house. A print of his African series is fetching $5,000.

the Packers and the Jets. And the big two hour Christmas episode of the Simpsons. In fact, he is still going today. An American institution. Eighty four years old and still making his same speech over and over. Remarkable.

"Okay, students, pop quiz."

The students groaned.

"I want you to spend fifteen minutes writing a speech in the style of Al Gore, all self righteous and awkward and important, and I want you to spend the fifteen minutes after that writing a speech in the style of George W. Bush, spouting homilies and half truths and ending with veiled threats of conflagration and doom. A hint: imagine him talking out of the side of his mouth."

A hand went up.

"Yes?" Dr. Fassmeier said.

"Is there a topic?"

"Make up your own. It could be How to Screw in a Lightbulb. Or it could be on the Advantages of a Benevolent Dictatorship."

"Okay."

"During the vacation, I'd like you to read the next four chapters, Chapter Twelve, The Bush Impeachment and Chaney Heart Attack; Chapter Thirteen, the Caretaker Administration of Harold P. Hoffenfeffer; Chapter Fourteen, the Statistical Tie Primary of 2004 Between Gore and Hillary; and Chapter Fifteen, the Mass Murder of the Electoral Collegians in December 2008."

Monitors with blue composition notebooks walked up the aisles and handed them to the students on the ends of the rows. Those students handed them along the rows, one to a customer.

"Everybody got a composition book? Good. You have half an hour before the bell," said Dr. Fassmeier.

Jennifer Barnett, a freshman, turned to the girl sitting next to her. "What's playing at the quad?" she asked. "Anything good?"

"There's the new Macauley Culken Home Alone movie DON'T FOOL WITH GRAMPS."

"Oh cool." •

Watching A Jeep Do A 360 On The Ice On The Montauk Highway In Water Mill

By Dan Rattiner

Two weeks ago, during that cold rainy spell just after Thanksgiving, I was in Water Mill about to pull out onto the Montauk Highway from the Amoco Station. The road is straight here for a quarter mile in each direction. And people tend to speed. I was about to experience one of the most terrifying events of my life.

It was dusk. It had been raining hard, but it had slowed to a drizzle and I could see clearly in both directions. I looked to the right and the road was clear. I looked to the left. Far down the road, heading toward me, there was a black Jeep Cherokee beginning to go into a skid.

I stared at it blankly. What I should have done was pull out onto the road to get away from what was clearly an out of control situation heading in my direction. But the Jeep was going so fast I hesitated. I needed to see which way it was going to spin. Perhaps I was best off right where I was.

As this jeep grew larger and larger, it turned clockwise in slow motion. First it was sideways to me. Then backward, then sideways the other way. And it was sliding right down the centerline of the highway, varying neither left nor right. In moments, it had slid by me and come to a halt, still on the centerline, thirty yards down the road. At the wheel, and I could see her very clearly as she skidded by, was a woman with dark brown hair, sitting absolutely motionless, absolutely without emotion, but with her eyes wide open.

In the back seat, there was a baby seat strapped in. And in it, a baby. All that was visible was the top of a blond head. It had just been on one long, beautiful sleighride. And now it was over.

But there was still trouble. The Jeep, its engine running, was still on the white line in the middle of the street. It couldn't stay there. So now I jumped out of my car and in the rain began to run toward it. There were still no other cars, Thank God, coming in either direction. But there surely would be soon.

Before I could get to it, though, the woman struggled with the steering wheel, and let out this primal, high pitched scream. Then she got it in gear, and drove it slowly off the road onto the shoulder. And it was at that moment I arrived.

In moments, she was in the back, holding the baby seat, the baby in it, sobbing and crying.

She hadn't even seen me. Instead, she had set the brake – she must have – and she had freed herself from her seatbelt and was climbing over the front seat to her baby. In moments, she was in the back, holding the baby seat, the baby in it, sobbing and crying. And now she had the baby free and was clutching it to her chest.

I opened the rear door. I was in shock too from what I had just witnessed.

"You're all right, you're all right," I said. I was crying too now. "You didn't hit anything. The baby's fine."

Suddenly, the woman, holding her baby, stumbled out of the back seat of her car and into my arms. I held her. And I rocked her back and forth. She was sobbing and shivering in the rain.

"It's over," I said. I sheltered the baby under my coat. "It's all right." I stroked her hair. There was the smell of sweat, a sharp, animal smell.

We stayed like this for two, maybe three minutes. Cars were whizzing by now. We must have looked like two lovers, this baby between us, hugging for no particular reason there along the side of the road.

After awhile, she settled down. I settled down too. The baby, who was about a year and a half, had never been anything but settled down. She cooed and giggled.

And so, when we both had regained our composure, we separated, smoothed our clothes, she mumbled thank you and without once looking at me, put the baby back in the seat, the seatbelt closing with a click, got in the front and drove off.

I stood there and stared after her for a very long time. I had absolutely no idea who she was.

Returning to my car, I climbed in and opened the windows to get some air. I was still shaking. Then I pulled out onto the road, and was on my way.

The dashboard of my car, a Lincoln, has an illuminated digital display which gives the outside temperature. It read 32 degrees. But I knew that. I've had this car for almost two years now. And at 32 degrees, or 31 or 33, in the rain, there are slippery conditions, even with those special brakes new cars have. My car has them. I skid anyway.

I look at the display when I drive. It's 36, 35, going down. What do those temperature displays cost anyway? A dollar? I am fully alert and driving slowly when it gets to 33. Right around 33 and a degree or two lower, they call it black ice.

I do not understand why every car does not have them. Standard equipment. Seatbelts are standard equipment. Temperature gauges should be standard equipment.

As far as this particular stretch of the Montauk Highway is concerned, there ought to be a study done to see if it is as dangerous as I think it is. I believe there are many accidents here. I think after much stop and go driving, people tend to open it up a bit. Perhaps there ought to be a slippery when wet sign, or yellow flashing warning lights that go on under dangerous conditions.

As far as that woman and her baby are concerned, I think of them often. We shared a single stresssful moment for a moment in our lives. We did what we did and I was glad to have been of help. God bless you and your child. •

Get Out Those Life Jackets

String Of Titanics Could Sink Again In Ports Around The Country

By Dan Rattiner

The Titanic legend just keeps going and going. More than a hundred books have been written about it. Four movies have been made about it — the most recent grossing more than two billion dollars — and there has even been a Broadway show, a musical comedy if you can believe it, about it. (The songs were composed by East Hampton composer Cy Coleman. The play received four Tony Awards. Even though the Titanic, the stage version, on several occasions, failed to sink when the ropes and pullies got tangled up with one another. Once, they even had to cancel the performance right there in the middle of the final act.)

Now, there comes The Titanic, the floating hotel.

Out in San Francisco, last week, a group of wealthy investors made a presentation to the City Council to bring a full scale replica of the ship, built at a cost of $150 million, to a berth at Pier 35. It would be appointed almost exactly as the original, with 568 staterooms, a convention center, three restaurants, a staff of more than a thousand, and, if estimates were correct, a profit from day one. They would call it Titanic II, and further down the road there could be a Titanic III in Hawaii and maybe a Titanic IV in the port of Miami and so forth and so on.

"Titanic II will be as grand and as majestic as the original when she captured the world's attention with her launching," read a glossy full color brochure presented to the Council. "So, too, her entrance under the Golden Gate Bridge will be a worldwide media event. We hope to have Kate Winslet and Leonardo DiCaprio riding the bow on her entrance into the bay."

American is undergoing Disneyfication. There's no more there there and so we celebrate what used to be but isn't anymore.

Of course, the entrance into San Francisco Bay would be slow and seriously tug-aided. In the bowels of the ship, instead of a series of massive steam engines, there would be a multi-level parking garage where a valet service would park the cars of the people visiting the Titanic. The only power on the ship will come from a relatively tiny 6,000 horsepower gasoline engine that could rev up Titanic II enough to just barely chug around inside the Bay.

The proposal was greeted with enthusiasm by the Mayor's office, which has strong ties to the business community, and which, just last year, approved a project at Wharf 45 for a series of "museums," including a re-created Fishermen's Wharf, a replica of the Barbary Coast and trolly ride past an exact reproduction of Haight Ashbury.

The City Council, however, was not amused. One member noted that 1,522 people died on the Titanic. What an insult to their memory. Next would be a replica of the explosion of the Hindenberg.

Nevertheless, the Councilman noted that the Mayor, in the absence of appalled, organized and overwhelming public opposition, can sway enough votes for approval.

Personally, I think this is an absolutely great idea. I'd love to be on the Titanic, especially if they add an occasional abandon ship drill where everybody has to don life jackets and, watching while fireworks flares are sent up, climb down ropes to fight for spots in waiting overcrowded lifeboats. They could make the hotel tremble just before they have the drill. Everything would be perfectly safe. The hotel does float after all, though in maybe just five feet of water. Shouldn't be too hard.

(And those wishing not to participate check this box here. Just stay in your staterooms for the duration.)

I also think they have misnamed the ship. Nobody wants to be on the Titanic II. What if the developers, wildly successful, opened one in New York Harbor and it were the Titanic XIII? Who cares? People want to be on the Titanic. They should rename it Titanic. And in smaller print, San Francisco's Floating Hotel. And in New York, New York's Floating Hotel. Or just name it Titanic and under it in small print San Francisco. You know how they have the port of registry on many boats?

I even think the Titanic would fly in the Hamptons. Tie it up in Southampton on the bay side of the Shinnecock Inlet. On the back it would read Titanic and then Southampton, celebrating its port of disembarkation in England in 1911. You'd have this spectacular view over Ponquogue Bridge getting out to it. The rich in our community could fight over First Class. And if we had a Hurricane like the famous one in '38, all the better. No one ever called the crew of the Titanic anything but brave and professional.

America is undergoing Disneyfication. There's no more there there. No more farmers and fishermen and blue collar workers in any great numbers. And so we celebrate what used to be but what isn't anymore. Are we, after all, otherwise, just a group of people looking at computer screens. •

Lighting The Big Kahuna

There Are Tree Lighting Ceremonies And Tree Lighting Ceremonies And Tree Lighting Ceremonies

By Dan Rattiner

During these last few days there have been tree lighting ceremonies all over the Hamptons. They lit the tree across from Town Pond in East Hampton. They lit the tree in Agawam Park in Southampton. Last Wednesday evening, however, we decided to go to the biggest tree lighting ceremony in the Hamptons. The tree lighting at Rockefeller Center in New York. We'd have dinner, go to the tree lighting, stay overnight, make a mini-vacation out of it.

Cathie had a dentist appointment with Dr. Rossner in Wainscott at noon. But the good doctor promised she would be finished with Cathie by one – this is a series of appointments to install a bridge – and we would make the 1:20 Jitney to the Big Apple Hampton from the stop right out front in plenty of time. We wanted to get in early so we wouldn't get caught up in the huge traffic jams that take place around the time of the tree lighting. They close a good number of streets off.

We arrived right on time at 3:45, walked to our hotel, then had an early dinner at the Harvard Club. Dinner guests included Wall Street's Mickey Siebert who is doing a stint as a guest host on CNN. Also Steve Browand and his wife Ana. Steve has a firm that provides security at some of the fancy parties that are held in the Hamptons. Also Mischa Brenner, a computer specialist under contract to IBM, his wife Natasha who is studying law, TV personality Katlean de Monchy and her husband/manager David Post and Cathie and I. The setting was the grand dining room at the Harvard Club just off Fifth Avenue on West 44th Street.

This was a rollicking good time. And after several hours of wine and food, we were telling stories and talking animatedly about the currently unresolved Presidential election, when I looked at my watch and saw that the actual tree lighting itself had taken place ten minutes earlier. Well, we'd go later in the evening.

"Let's just walk there," she said. And so we did slogging through the rain, with me holding the umbrella over our heads.

"How DO they turn it on and off anyway?" somebody asked.

"They use the clapper," Cathie said.

We really were having a wonderful time.

Dinner ended and we shook hands all around. I announced that those who would like to join Cathie and I on the five block walk up to Rockefeller Center should meet in the lobby as we would be going upstairs to get our coats – we were staying at the club – and would also have to bring down our umbrellas as it was starting to rain. Some of the dinner guests stayed, some left.

On the elevator coming back downstairs, however, Cathie's tooth began to hurt. By the time we had gotten to the lobby, she was in desperate pain. And I realized we would have to go back up and get her some medicine. We went back up to our room. We had forgotten to bring it.

Back in the lobby, I told everyone we'd go separately because we'd have to find a pharmacy open nearby. And so we headed out.

The doorman had told us there was an all night drug store at the corner of Eighth and 42nd, and by this time, Cathie was in agony. Though this is just a short walk from the Club, I tried to get a cab, but there was none.

"Let's just walk there," she said.

And so we did, slogging through the rain, with me holding the umbrella over our heads with one arm and the other arm around her to support her. On the way, using the cel phone, I got in touch with Dr. Rossner, who told me she would call in a prescription for Cathie just as soon as we found a place. At this point, we passed the Algonquin Hotel with the doorman out front in sequins, hat and tails, and I thought he might know of one closer. Or on our way up toward Rockefeller Center. But he said the only one he knew was on Lexington, which was the other way.

We got to the drugstore, a Duane Reade, to find out that though they were open 24 hours a day, the pharmacy part had just closed. Still, an employee there, a very caring man, ran and got her some Advil and a cup of water. The Advil was about six dollars and I gave him a ten and told him to keep the change, but he refused to do so. He just wanted to help, he said

He did tell us there was a Duane Reade at 57th and Broadway and it had a 24 hour pharmacy and I phoned there and linked the pharmacist there up with Dr. Rossner and so we headed back out onto the street. It was pouring rain now, some of the theatres were letting out – this is the Great White

preview: leonard peltier

By Helga Morgurgo

A body of 30 paintings by self-taught artist, Leonard Peltier will be featured in a solo exhibit at The Red Barn Atelier, a not-for-profit charitable and educational salon des artistes located at 88 North Main Street, Southampton, NY.

The opening will be from 5-9 pm on Saturday, December 9, 2000. A silent auction will follow on December 10th—the same day that a Human Rights Leonard Peltier Walk For Freedom will lead participants gathering at noon at Union Square to a program of speakers, cultural activities, and traditional music from 2-4 pm at the Dag Hammarskjold Plaza of the United Nations.

("Through my paints," Leonard says, "I can be with my people, in touch with my culture, tradition and spirit, I can watch little children in regalia, dancing and smiling, see my elders in prayer, behold the intense glow of a warrior's eye. As I work the canvas, I'm a free man.")

During nearly twenty-five years of incarceration for crimes Mr. Peltier insists he did not commit, his outstanding achievements have made him a symbol of compassionate spirituality for indigenous people all over the world.

Leonard Peltier may well be considered the Nelson Mandela of the western world—and when he is finally granted "Executive Clemency" that act of governmental justice alone will begin a process of healing and renewal in the collective conscience of all humanity.

Ironically, Mr. Peltier is more widely known abroad than he is in America even though he has been the subject of numerous books such as Peter Matthiessen's In the Spirit of Crazy Horse and documentaries such as Robert Redford's Incident at Oglala.

As an artist, Leonard Peltier speaks his native language through the eloquent silence of his hands – a passionate and gentle language full of anguish, resolute strength, inner beauty and intense spirituality. Through his art he has opened a window to the soul of Native America.

Many of the canvases are understandably small – painted in prison at night after work, with supplies purchased from a prison commissary.

Native American subjects reach beyond the limitations of their canvases to the burning memory of Indian life on the reservation—as the artist's imagination reaches beyond the boundaries of his prison cell to family, friends, and a proud culture that continues to sustain him through the painful emptiness of his austere circumstances. While he paints the artist forgets to feel the winter chill of the night, the fear of threatening shadows around him. While he paints the artist reaches out and touches the freedom he has not known for a quarter of a century. His art sustains him. Although blind in one eye, he continues to paint, guided by his intense inner vision, his love for humanity, his compassion and relentless faith in what many of us call "the Creator."

Leonard Peltier is also a wise and articulate writer – a poet of depth and simple honesty. His prison memoirs entitled "Prison Writings: My Life is My Sun Dance," was published in June by St. Martin's Griffin Press in New York with a preface by former Attorney General of the United States, Ramsey Clark.

"I think I can explain beyond serious doubt that Leonard Peltier has committed no crime whatsoever," Ramsey Clark wrote... "There was absolutely no evidence that he killed anyone – except fabricated and utterly misleading circumstantial evidence."

Leonard Peltier has been refused parole twice because he would not admit to having committed a crime that human rights organizations all over the world know he is innocent of.

In his book Leonard Peltier writes: "My life is an extended agony. I feel as though I've lived a hundred lifetimes in prison already. And maybe I have. But I'm prepared to live thousands more on behalf of my people. If my imprisonment does nothing more than educate an unknowing and uncaring public about the terrible conditions Native Americans and all indigenous people around the world continue to endure, then my suffering has had – and continues to have – a purpose."

Leonard Peltier's worldwide human rights achievements are too many to list. Let it suffice to say that humanity has been greatly enriched by his presence on the planet and even while he has been incarcerated for nearly half his life Mr. Peltier has significantly affected the lives of others as a spiritual leader, a peacemaker and a caring human being.

Among the human rights awards he has received for his outstanding services to humanity are the North Star Frederick Douglas Award, Humanist of the Year Award, and the International Human Rights Award.

An Irresistible Force Meets An Immovable Object In Sag Harbor

By Dan Rattiner

They had the United Nations Global Warming Conference at the Hague last week. At the opening ceremonies – in a theatre where delegates from more than 150 countries had assembled – the president of the organization got up, walked over to the speaker's lecturn and, before he could say anything, got hit by a chocolate cream pie. It was thrown, at close quarters, by a man, a gymnast actually, who had swooped down from the rafters of the theatre, some say on a rope, and threw it with perfect accuracy. Then he disappeared up the aisle and out and down the street before anybody could stop him. Some said he was dressed in black. Some say he was a she.

"I say this serves as an exclamation point to what we are trying to do here," the president said over the microphone, "which is to find better standards we can agree upon to lower our carbon emissions into the atmosphere."

He wiped a piece of whipped cream off his chin.

It was all to no avail. After four days, the conference broke up without having reached a single agreement.

It was with this event in mind that I pondered what might happen Tuesday December 5 here in Sag Harbor. Once again the forces of good were demonstrating. Once again the forces of evil, well, not evil exactly, were holding fast to the status quo. Vegetables might be involved. Last time this demonstration took place on the steps of the Village Hall – and they have held several in the past ten months – goats were involved. You never know. The demonstration was scheduled for 7 p.m. 7 p.m. is the time the village board meets to ponder the events of the week.

The facts of the case are not in dispute. There was, for years, a dairy farm on the corner of Long Island Avenue and Glover Street in Sag Harbor. Cows, barns, milking machines, a little bottling facility. But the property, owned by the Cilli family, was only 10 acres, and things being what they are, in time, the place shut down for economic reasons. It then went into a fallow period. An acre with the buildings on it was sold off and made into a private residence. As for the remaining nine acres, it was purchased by the Village of Sag Harbor this past June for $1 million. Since then, nothing has been done with the property. Anytime soon, nothing is expected to be done with the property.

The reason, it seems, is that Mayor Bill Young, a merchant who recently sold the Seven-Eleven in that town for more money than any other Seven-Eleven has been sold for anywhere else in the country, according to Seven-Eleven, is that Bill Young's foray into public service has only just begun with his election to the post of mayor. It is a learning experience for him. And he must be circumspect. Perhaps these nine acres should be a War Memorial as some veterans have proposed. Perhaps they should be an organic vegetable farm as some other people have proposed. Perhaps it should be allowed to just overgrow with weeds.

Perhaps in ten years, some new administration might decide to make a youth park out of the property. You can't turn it into a youth park if it is already a war memorial. And what about restrictions on what could be done with this property? Suffolk County kicked in $450,000. What strings were attached to that money?

It does, indeed, make perfect sense. There are wonderful organic farms all over the Hamptons.

From this perspective, Mayor Young might be considered the immovable object in the determination of what is to be done with the old Cilli Farm at this time.

On the other hand, there is a young man in town, someone who grew up in these parts in a house on Madison Street, who is something of a free spirit. He went to Pierson High School, then to the University of California at Santa Cruz, then off around the world, to Australia where he worked as a fruit picker, to Germany where he worked as a pizza cook on an American army base, to Colorado where he worked as a ski instructor. Now he's back in town and he and his friends, and at first just a few people, and then more people, and now just about half the town, have joined him in a groundswell of public opinion to FARM CILLI FARM as the bumper stickers say.

This young man is twenty-six, is named Eesha Williams, and has been printing leaflets, getting people involved, setting up petition tables and going to village board meetings since February, trying to persuade Mayor Young and his cohorts to allow a community vegetable farm to be installed on this property. Consider Eesha Williams the Irresistable Force.

It does, indeed, make perfect sense. There are wonderful organic farms all over the Hamptons. People get together and chip in a few bucks to hire a farmer. He plants radishes and lettuce and carrots and tomatoes, tends them for the summer with organic fertilizers and every once in a while when something gets ripe, everybody goes down to the farm with baskets, goes through the rows of greenery harvesting red peppers or squash or corn or whatever. It becomes a social occasion. Some of these farms have cocktail parties and even barbecues and bonfires on the property in the evening in the summertime. What fun.

Ten years from now? The Village wants to build a Youth Playground or a Cyber Cafe or a Meditation Park, just shut the farm down. No problem. Farms come and go. Hasn't the mayor been to New York where the mayor there has no problem allowing little farms to be put in wherever there is an empty lot for a while?

"We've gone to every single village board meeting since February," Eesha says. "First thing they do at the meeting is ask the general public if they have anything on their minds and we're up and asking about letting the people Farm Cilli Farm. Then after a minute they say they have to move on. They say thank you. Then that's it. Nothing. It never gets onto the agenda."

Why this particular demonstration?

"The village clerk says our petition only had 145 signatures. What we submitted had 1,100. Half the town. And now it's up to 1,300. We want to show these 1,300 names. And also the endorsements of Fred Thiele, our State Assemblyman, the endorsements of the Southampton Town Board, and of the Sag Harbor School Superintendent Kathryn Holden."

Nearly fifty people assembled on the steps of Village Hall to hear speaker after speaker including Father Andrew Blake of St. Andrews Catholic Church demand that the Cilli Farm be used as an open-to-the-public, non-profit, educational organic farm for the people of Sag Harbor. The demonstration lasted about an hour, outdoors out front for awhile and then indoors in the court meeting room.

Give it up Mayor Young. You don't need any zoning variances to allow Sag Harbor people to go out and plant vegetables on a parcel of land they own.

Maybe somebody ought to pop this man with a chocolate creme pie. Or a pumpkin pie. Knock some sense into him. •

Way – and we stood awhile trying to get a cab. There was just no way. I was leading Cathie to the entrance of the Subway, it would just be two stops uptown, when, suddenly, a cab appeared, stopped, and a fare got out. I ran to it, but a heavyset woman beat me there.

"Please!" I shouted. "I've got to get this woman to a pharmacy."

The woman backed away.

Getting into the cab was another matter. The rain water from this storm rushing down the gutter was almost a foot deep. There was no way to get in the cab without stepping into it up to your ankles. It was true, I could have told the cab to pull up a carlength. But then the fat lady might get it. We just sloshed through and piled in.

"57th and Broadway and hurry," I shouted. Cathie, moaning in pain now, had her head in my lap. She was announcing that this hurt more than anything ever. Childbirth was a piece of cake.

Half an hour later, we stumbled out of another cab in front of the Harvard Club, and Cathie and I squish, squish, squished up the five carpeted steps to the doorman. He held the door open and nodded a salute. Membership has its privileges. We took the Jitney back out to Wainscott the next morning and Dr. Rossner saw Cathie on an emergency basis.

The tree lighting, people tell me, was as sensational as always. The Mayor was there. He pulled a switch. Carolers sang Christmas songs. It was on TV.

Next week, there is another tree lighting ceremony in the Hamptons. It's so nice how the different towns work together to hold them on different days so they don't compete with one another. Okay, so there is not a tree lighting ceremony on December 8. But there is a breakfast with Santa at the Springs Community Church on December 9 from 9-11 a.m. We'll go to that. •

Mr. Peltier currently serves on the board of the Rosenberg Fund For Children and has been the sponsoring father of two children in Childreach, one in El Salvador, and the other in Guatemala.

He has instituted countless programs for the betterment of mankind and has generously donated his art for their funding.

Through the many years he has spent in a federal prison Leonard has emerged as a master of Indigenous Art. His passionate self-taught style is an outgrowth from the drawing and carving lessons he received as a child from tribal elders on the Turtle Mountain Reservation in North Dakota, where he was born. Each of his paintings is based on folklore and true life Native American experience. The artist offers a written explanation of the story behind each painting.

While Mr. Peltier continues to serve time in the Leavenworth Penitentiary in Kansas, the Leonard Peltier Defense Committee is raising funds for his defense through the sale of limited edition full color lithographs from his paintings. A brochure of the work can be obtained by calling: 785-842-5774.

Only President Clinton can grant Leonard Peltier "executive clemency" before he leaves office on January 20, 2001. Granting clemency to Mr. Peltier would bring about a healing between the United States government and its first Americans.

"Clemency is granted when an individual has a severe sentence, when the prisoner is ineligible for parole, when an inmate suffers from old age or a critical illness, or when the prisoner displays meritorious service."

Mr. Peltier was indeed given a severe sentence. As long as he refuses to admit guilt he remains ineligible for parole. He is now 56 years old and has already suffered a stroke that left him 85% blind in one eye. He also has a heart condition and diabetes. He has more than met the requirements of giving meritorious service. A pardon is already overdue.

The only hope Leonard Peltier has of ever being able to be in the company of his family and friends again is the compassion of the American people. Please join the Dalai Lama, Archbishop Tutu and countless other supporters by calling the White House Comments Line at: 202-456-1111 to request Leonard Peltier's immediate release.

"I write this book to bring a greater understanding of what being an Indian means, of who we are as human beings. We're not quaint curiosities of stereotypical figures in a movie, but ordinary – and, yes, at times, extraordinary – human beings. Just like you. We feel. We bleed. We are born. We die." # Alan Siegel

Global Brand Strategist

By Susan Simm

Walking into the offices of Siegelgale is like walking straight into the pages of One Man's Eye, founder and CEO Alan Siegel's newly published book containing many photographs from his unusual personal collection. Occupying the third floor at 10 Rockefeller Plaza, Siegelgale's offices serve as a gallery for part of this collection and it is just astonishing when you come 'face to face' with the photographs you have come to know in the book. Alan Siegel's creation of this book was "a labor of love:

"Photography is my passion, a part of my life."

Another of his creations, Siegelgale, is also a big part of his life and no less self-defining. This is, in no sense, an ordinary collection. Just as Alan Siegel is, in no sense, an ordinary man.

I am led away from the reception area around a curved wall of burled, blonde wood to glimpse the top of the magnificent, recently lit tree, visible from a company terrace. "We had a party here Wednesday night, when they lit the tree," said Alan. Tall and elegant, Mr. Siegel is at once soft-spoken and direct. He exudes intensity and enthusiasm but is infinitely approachable.

I ask the obvious question: What is a "global brand strategist"? Alan, a born entrepreneur, describes what Siegelgale does and what his role is in the firm: "We help companies build powerful brands, we help them define who they are, why they are relevant and what makes them different from their competition. I founded the company in 1969 and my original vision was to help other companies 'find themselves' and build powerful identities; we do this by positioning companies and creating integrated communications programs. I consider myself to be a problem solver, writer and conceptual person."

Alan does not consider himself to be a designer, with one exception: He designed the NBA logo. He was on the basketball team while attending Cornell University and still loves the game.

Companies seek Siegelgale's services for a number of reasons, not the least of which is image. "Companies come to us when they have done research and realize that the way that they are perceived in the marketplace is very different from the way they would like to be perceived and their brand, or company image, has eroded and this is having an adverse affect on their position in the marketplace, on their stock and on their ability to attract employees," Alan said.

Many of Siegelgale's clients are Internet-based.

"We've had an explosion of business with new Internet companies coming to us: they need to have a name, they need to be positioned and they need to be launched."

Alan believes that the Internet "is the future of real-time, two-way communication between people around the world. It's extraordinary!" Siegelgale has even done away with company brochures, relying instead on their website. Alan also believes that there are products and services that the Internet is perfect for, such as certain auction sites where it makes sense "to mass together several companies and generate better pricing from vendors."

When asked about the market downturn, especially in technology, Alan is still optimistic about the future. "People got enamoured with the efficiency and immediacy offered by the Internet and came out with products that weren't really fully developed. These companies were just financial plays. People put together business plans and models that made no sense and a lot of their products and services were supported by advertising, which was not a successful medium," said Alan. He feels that there was an unrealistic sense of "euphoria about what the Internet offered and it out-distanced what the marketplace was willing to accept. I think that we're having a shake-out right now, but there is still a huge investment in technology and there are many companies that do have sound business models."

Siegelgale deals with many large companies whose Internet sites, which they also design, do a lot more than sell products. Alan comments, "Their Internet sites do away with the need to go to the library or to send away for their annual reports. For big corporations, the Internet is even a terrific access point for recruiting: it is a very important part of these companies' brand-building and image-building programs." Even Siegelgale itself, a mid-size, private company, gets thousands of "hits" a week from potential clients and web-surfers.

Among Siegelgale's Internet clients are The Weather Channel, for whom they designed the website "Weather.com," and Ernst & Young's site, "Ernie," that offers the firm's services to small businesses that otherwise would not be able to afford them. Siegelgale also did the branding for the website "DLJ Direct."

Alan Siegel describes himself as "an arch advocate of writing that is simple, elegant and human." He is a champion of the use of "plain English" in business documents and has written books and taught courses at Carnegie Mellon and Fordham Law School, on the topic. Alan prides himself on his skills as a "communicator" and has worked extremely hard on revising consumer forms, especially bank loan forms. He worked on a project for what was to become Citibank in the mid-70s. Alan describes the loan forms used at the time as "unintelligible, offensive and legalistic. I told the bank that if they really wanted to project the image of being the most progressive bank in the country, then the documents would need to be re-written." After successfully convincing the bank's lawyers to agree with him, Alan traveled all over the country, establishing relationships with banks and insurance companies. Siegelgale even enjoys the distinction of having created the simplified tax form, the 1040EZ form, for the IRS.

It is this attraction to the power of simplicity that makes Irving Penn Alan's favorite photographer. Alan writes in the introduction to One Man's Eye, "His pictures appear [throughout] my collection, and are united in their sober, elegant clarity. Penn demonstrates the art of 'talking straight' with the power of a simple, graphic vocabulary..."

Alan also found himself attracted to the bucolic, rural quality of the South Fork in the late 60s when he began renting houses in Amagansett and then later in East Hampton. He finally purchased a carriage house (which he still owns) in Bridgehampton in 1973: "The first time I saw my future house, I couldn't just go to look at it because there were people staying there and so I drove over and stood on top of my car so that I could see it." A Hampton Library member for 27 years, Alan always went to "Fridays at 5" to hear authors talk about their books but these days, he keeps a lower profile. "When I first bought my house, the atmosphere was still very rural and relaxed. I can't believe what a transformation has taken place in Brideghampton, with all the snazzy stores and restaurants. Now, on busy summer weekends, I just stay home and kayak on the pond."

In his introduction to One Man's Eye, Alan writes, "Photography has had a dramatic impact on my life. It stimulated dormant creative urges and a passion for the visual arts, led me to an exciting and productive career in communications and design, and provided a lifelong intellectual pursuit..." When I asked Alan how he became interested in writing One Man's Eye, he described how he has gone about collecting photographs over the last thirty years. "There were circus people in my family. I found the photograph "Congress of Freaks with Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus," which appears on the book's jacket] in a bin at a Sotheby's auction. I was the only bidder; everyone laughed when I bid on it! I get more excitement by finding the unusual thing that somehow relates to my life and is offbeat. I no longer buy vintage prints by famous photogra-

TWENTY YEARS AGO
"The Governor Vs. The Dentist"
November 21, 1980

Governor Carey did battle with a Scarsdale dentist last week on Shelter Island and the Scarsdale dentist won. So much for our Governor who keeps dropping hints that he wouldn't mind being President some day.

Of course, it first looked as if Governor Carey was going to win the battle. The dentist, Philip D'Arrigo, had gotten it in his head last year that he'd like to have a summer home on Shelter Island. He looked at, then bought, a piece of waterfront land right next to where the governor has his summer home ("I checked to see whether they had offered it to the Governor first – which they had and to which he did not reply," he said), and then he got all the necessary zoning permits and commenced to build a summer home.

Last week, as we reported in this newspaper, the State Police arrived on the building site and "seized" the property because they said that it constituted a danger to Governor Carey's security. From the second story window of D'Arrigo's house, the police said, it would be possible for a gunman with a high powered rifle to nail the Governor through a bedroom window, not to mention through the front porch.

Well, there has rarely been a public reaction so forceful and so one-sided as reaction to this seizure. A man's home is his castle after all, and as D'Arrigo explained, all he wanted to do is build his own home on his own land. A simple and compelling argument.

Reporters and newsmen swarmed all over Shelter Island last week, and public opinion ran almost unanimously against the Governor. Who assassinates a Governor anyway, somebody wanted to know. What is he going to do, buy the whole island? Perhaps the real problem was that it interfered with the Governor's unobstructed view of the bay that is beyond the front lawn of his house. Perhaps he just didn't like the design of the D'Arrigo house.

Considering that the Governor had previously been offered the land for sale before D'Arrigo bought it, the Governor didn't seem to have much of a case in the event that D'Arrigo wanted to go to court, which is exactly what he said he would do. Within twenty-four hours of the "seizure," the Governor ordered said seizure cancelled. Some lumber on the building site, which a state truck had unceremoniously removed for storage was ceremoniously returned. A jubilant D'Arrigo announced that the Governor's reversal had restored his faith in the American way. He said he'd invite the Governor over for drinks.

But the thing has not just ended with the victory of the Scarsdale Dentist. An investigation has begun, prodded I think by Republican lawmakers, who would like to see the Governor hang by his heels, and it has now been revealed just what the State has ALREADY spent on "security" for the Governor's summer home. It has spent $12,000 for outdoor lighting so prospective assassins can't sneak up in the night; it has spent $6,523 of the taxpayers' money for an all weather surface on the Carey driveway together with two parking spaces for two police cars; it has spent $3,500 for what is called "restorative landscaping" which means its earlier expenses had made a terrible mess or it wanted bushes for the police to lurk behind in specific areas, and it has spent $2,477 to build the Governor a boating dock, which required $600 in repairs last year.

The Governor, confronted with all of this, has taken the offensive. Instead of apologizing or explaining all these expenses, he has announced that his $85,000 per year plus expenses salary is simply not enough for him to live on and he needs a raise.

"I cannot continue to subsidize the State of New York out of my meager funds," the governor said, in asking the State Legislature for a 70% pay increase. It didn't seem to mean much that he is the highest paid Governor in the nation already.

Phone calls around the country indicate that few other states are as concerned with their governor's "security" as the Governor of New York. In Connecticut, Governor Grasso merits nothing more than a police escort when she drives to either of her two private residences – one at Windsor Locks, the other at Old Lyme. In Texas, where a wealthy Governor Clemens has four private residences, the state only provides "security" at one of them, and that consists of some radio equipment they've installed in his garage, which they've made into an office.

book review: the last sitting

By Marion Wolberg-Weiss

Marilyn Monroe is not just a beloved movie star who died almost forty years ago. Her image conjures up so much more in the annals of pop culture: a sex symbol victimized by society, her persona evolving with each passing decade.

Bert Stern's book, Marilyn Monroe: The Last Sitting, captures for all time the child-adult figure that Monroe evokes. Most importantly, however, his photographs reveal not only her figure as an object, but they also preserve her dignity as a human being.

The book's arrangement is partly responsible for this revelation; so are the photographs themselves. Consistently placed opposite several small pictures to the left of the page, a single full- page photo is juxtaposed on the right-hand side. This fragmentation versus wholeness sets the perception that this book (unconsciously or not) communicates—Monroe was someone who was both fractured by her own demons and/or those exerted by show business and someone who was integrated at the same time.

Despite the contradictions, we yearn to experience her totality, imagining that somehow she would have "gotten herself together," overcoming her obstacles if she had lived. We can't even contemplate that she commited suicide, not this joyful spirit captivated by Stern's camera. Murder becomes a more viable explanation.

On second thought, "captivated" and "spirit" also seem like a contradictory notion. The book's pages may have reined in Monroe, but her " spirit" spills over, nonetheless, to enter the viewer's consciousness.

Examining the full-page photographs reveals another phenomenon: the images start with head-and-shoulder shots. As they progress through the manuscript, the images encompass more of the body. We not only literally see more as Monroe's body is given exposure, but we also perceive more about her multidimensional personality.

Yet in the book's final pages, images return to medium close-up configurations. Just as we begin to appreciate Monroe's completeness, we are shut out once again as in the initial pages. This time, however, the view is even more constrained. Ultimately, we have no choice but to back off.

Looking at the pictures themselves, without regard to size or placement, conveys the nature of her victimization: a standard sexist attitude which focuses (literally and figuratively) on Monroe as the object of a "male gaze." While Mr. Stern has always been remarkably sensitive toward women, he can't escape the demands of his trade (and gender).

Physical objects reinforce Monroe's image as an object herself: jewelry (necklaces, pearls), furs, veils and hats. Items that are both luxurious and decorative, that both cover and show the body simultaneously. In a word, things that are contradictory, just like Monroe. •

Bert Stern's book, Marilyn Monroe: The Last Sitting, is available at The Vered Gallery in East Hampton until the end of the year.

For those who knew and were invited to the Laundry's 20th anniversary as an eatery, according to buddy Neal Travis, local celebs Alec Baldwin, wife Kim Basinger, Lauren Bacall and others were on that special list. We are still waiting for our invite! No one makes a Cosmopolitan better; oh...they do serve food also.

We would love to add a few lines about our President-elect but we still don't know for sure who he is.

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER # 135

EYE OF THE BEHOLDER

I love art. I haven't got a shred of talent. I can throw a line, but I can't draw one. I envy people who can stand in front of a blank canvas and make it a thing of beauty. I am in awe of great talent and the East End is loaded.

No matter how much money I have or don't have I always seem to be paying for a piece of art. I was 23 when I bought my first original work of art. A large painting of a clam boat in a calm bay by local artist Teresa Shaw. It hangs in my house today. I was hooked. I have five pieces from Amram Ebgi, an Israeli artist. I am dying to buy something by Olive Reich of Shelter Island. I want something by Peter Waldner, also of Shelter Island; you might know him as the cartoonist who does "Paw Prints" cartoons, he also does beautiful paintings. My Uncle, Bill Colson of Sayville, did one of a barnyard rooster that I just love. I plan to whine and whimper until I get a copy someday.

I haven't got any appreciation for art other than just knowing what I like. I hate Picasso, Dali, Neiman; Jackson Pollock is a nightmare to me. But that's the beauty of art, there's something for everybody.

Art is pure. You like a painting or you don't. Like when people tell me I wrote something they didn't like. My response? Turn the page! You like someone's humor or you don't. I don't expect abstract artists to apologize to me for their deranged view of art. It would be nice, but I don't expect it. I just find something else to look at.

Two years ago I was picking up leaflets from a table when I looked up and saw seven paintings by Irwin Perton. One painting in particular seized my imagination. I think I stood there looking at it for fifteen minutes at least. The artist, Irwin Perton, came up and told me he had painted the seven days of creation and I was looking at Day Two. I was newly divorced, poor and depressed. This beautiful painting was like a beacon of light through a terrible darkness. I think he saw it in my eyes, because he let me pay it off as much as I could whenever I could.

It took me two years to get this painting. I went to pick it up at Irwin's in East Hampton. He lives in a remote, rural area of East Hampton. I didn't even know they had a remote area. He gave me careful directions:

"... and then it turns into a dirt road..." he said.

"There's no dirt road in East Hampton," I said.

"Oh, sure there are, lots of them. Then look for the big rock that looks like a bear.."

"Look for a rock?"

"Or is it a bear that looks like a rock? Anyway turn left there and count three houses."

"On the left or right?"

"It doesn't matter, there's just three houses."

Having attended the Stevie Wonder School of Driving, I made the 30 minute trip in 90 minutes. I stopped for directions a few times. There's an Electronics store on Old North Sea Rd that is closed for inventory. Two girls there gave me some directions. A man on a tractor on Long Lane told me where to go. A man in a red pick-up told me I veered wrong at the fork, which was now ten miles behind me. Finally pulling up into the Pertons' driveway after my extensive scenic tour of East Hampton, I felt I understood what it was to suffer for your art.

The Pertons have a large, graceful house in the woods. I had to laugh when I saw the sign in the front, "Protected by ADT." There's no way a thief could find this place. If he could, he'd have just as hard a time finding civilization again.

Irwin and his beautiful wife Selma, gave me a tour of the Perton Live-In Museum. Their home is elegantly appointed in every detail. They've worked hard all their lives and it's wonderful to see people reap the harvest of their labors and sacrifices. Every corner is filled with exquisite art and sculpture, it was Nirvana. His famous chairs were there. Each special chair painted completely in the style of the artist whose head was featured on the front. There was a Dali chair with dripping watches, a Gaughin chair with multiple naked native breasts, a lovely Monet chair, a Picasso chair with a half blue face at right angles to the neck and playing a guitar, and others, but I don't remember them.

I got to see his paintings with his poetry. My favorite was the one about his mother in a nursing home with buttons raining down from heaven. All colors and kinds of buttons, just like a mother would save. My grandmother had a button tin. My mother has one, I have one. It's something you get when you become a Mom. You never throw out a button, because you never know that button's next assignment. It might be to hold up pants or close a shirt. Buttons are important, we push them, we save them, we use them to button our lips. You need a button to hit something right on.

I got to see one of his first paintings, from over fifty years earlier, he said. The neighborhood he grew up in in Brooklyn. A row of brownstones and stores. On the first floor above one store was a woman watching out of a window; his mother, he said. I thought that was wonderful. No matter where he has gone in life, she has been watching her boy through that window. She has watched him become a kind and gentle man, and a gifted artist. We should all have a window like that. •

A belated congratulations to Alex Ricci, M.D. and his wife Wendy who welcomed a beautiful new daughter Sabrina Rose recently. Congrats!

Mrs. Sam "Twinnie" Weiss of Amagansett was featured on 20/20 Friday, December 1. She and her identical twin sister "Winnie" were the stars of the French Can-Can at Barbara Walters' father, Lou Walters' glamorous night club, The Latin Quarter. There was a touching, nostalgic interview with Barbara and the twins, but the highlight came when they did their signature dance, complete with high kicks, leaping splits and screams. "Twinnie" has become a popular sculptor, specializing in amazingly life-like portraits. The show ended on a delightful note with a glimpse of "Twinnie" sculpting in her studio.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

My best girlfriend, Sandra, got married in Santa Fe this past weekend. I flew out for the wedding. It was a little like going home to the Baja in terms of the landscape but strange to see snow on the ground. I'm used to the mountains and used to the desert but it threw me off to see snow in the mountains and to be at those elevations. There are parts of the Baja where the mountains meet the sea but even at the top of the peaks we are not very high above sea level. In Santa Fe I'm told we are looking at what used to be an Inland Sea but the earth is not as stable as it seems and in time this old sea bottom has created a land of elevated plateaus and mesas. I would like to go hunting for fossils. I'm fascinated by finding seashell fossils in the mountains.

The wedding was charming. There was a "new age" minister who used a cymbal at the start of the service. The sound focused our attention. She thanked the "grandparents" for creating the lives that were joining. She thanked the friends who gathered for creating the environment and the moment for the joining. It was a beautiful ceremony and a wonderful feast. We ordered a bountiful Indian dinner from a restaurant nearby. Sandra and Bill (the groom) rented a cottage in the city to have the gathering. Their house in the mountains is in the middle of a renovation and was too torn up for the wedding. The cottages are in the city. Nonetheless they have a rural country feeling. There was a fire blazing in the background. The feeling of warmth was within as well as around us.

We were instructed to take the love we felt in the room and from the marriage, to spend a moment of silence, to focus the loving energy, and send it out to the world. The love we felt at that moment can rebound and make everyone around us feel good. They don't even need to know why. It's contagious.

Sandra used to live in East Hampton. She moved upstate before she moved out West. After a divorce, she left the land she knew and all her friends and took a chance on a new life. Everyone told her how brave she was. She spent some very lonely times while adapting to her new life. Eventually she met Bill. Now, she and Bill have bought property and are rebuilding. They are both artists. They are in love. They have surrounded themselves with a small group of really wonderful friends and are encouraging growth and creativity all around them. Now they have made a public statement of their union. It was great to be a part of it. To see two people in love like they are can give the rest of us faith.

Besides telling a nice story about two people, my point is: we can take the love we feel for our loved ones and extend it out to the world. We can see the goodness between the people around us and use it to encourage a little faith about our own situations. We can take the joy of the moment and spread it around. Especially in this holiday season we can spread a little love and faith.

–Kimberly Goff

phers. In this collection, you will find a lot of odd stuff that most people wouldn't put in their collection, or publish."

Another interesting fact about the collection is that it is all framed and hanging either in Siegelgale's offices or in Alan's home. "Virtually everything is framed and up and we move it around all the time. We live with it; it's a part of our lives."

One Man's Eye has received a lot of positive attention. Alan said that, "a lot of people have described the book as something that surprised them. When they looked at it they had to put a lot more thought into it then the typical book of photographs." One of the most interesting aspects of One Man's Eye is the juxtaposition of the photographs: A picture by Robert Levin entitled "Salt" depicting piles of salt on a dark surface across from a photo by Lynn Davis of a pyramid; a photo by Weegee (Arthur Fellig), of Marilyn Monroe at the top of her career side by side with Robert Frank's photo, "Cape Cod," which depicts a young boy on the beach reading the newspaper announcing Marilyn's death; Robert Mapplethorpe's "Thomas" across from Louise Dahl-Wolfe's "Fashion."

One of the nicest compliments Alan has received regarding One Man's Eye came from Michael Thomas, the often-acerbic New York Observer columnist and Sag Harbor resident. Thomas wrote that this is "a true collection, at a level of choice and comprehension rarely encountered, formed by a really good eye roaming across a potentially vast, inchoate area of interest and making, again and again, individual choices that both stand alone yet make sense of their neighbors."

Why did Alan create One Man's Eye? As I mentioned earlier, Alan has written a number of books, including The New York Times bestseller The Wall Street Journal Guide to Money and Markets, but he still didn't have a voice to describe his passion for photography until he created his book. "It was hard to find my voice, but once I found it, I recognized it immediately. I wrote the text for the book in a couple of weeks. It's a modest autobiography: it's about collecting and it's about the individual photographs. But it is also about me and who I am." •

"He's not the President, you know," a spokesman for the governor said when asked why that was all.

In California, Governor Brown does not live in the State House but instead lives in a small suburban apartment. The State police have rented an apartment next door, which costs them $323 a month so they can keep an eye on things, and they've also brought in about $1,000 worth of security equipment which they had previously bought for Ronald Reagan. Good for one and good for the other.

So how is Governor Carey going to defend himself from the clean shot that somebody might take from the second story of the D'Arrigo house when the Governor is on his vacation? The Governor has tossed the problem back to Major Martin Burke who is the chief of security, and he has told him that if the second story windows continue to be considered a threat, then some other form of protection will have to be provided.

Perhaps they'll erect one of those invisible shields like they used to have on toothpaste commercials.

Contribute Generously To Dan's Annual Toy Drive

The toy drive is under way and the holidays are only a few weeks away. I would like to start out by thanking those who have already contributed to this wonderful cause. So, continue to fill the boxes with gifts.

Those of you who are not familiar with the Little Flower toy drive, this is a wonderful opportunity to help those less fortunate during the holiday season. Located in Wading River, Little Flower is home to thousands of children and residents of all ages, races, and religions The organization was founded in 1931 with the mission to care for infants and children who have lost that most precious possession, their family.

Boxes have been placed in several locations around the east end. These boxes are wrapped in holiday paper, so you cannot miss them. We are hopeful that our readers will overflow them with toys and gifts for the children and residents of Little Flower. And with your help the holiday spirit will be passed along.

To give you an idea of what they need and want we have compiled a wish list. Their wish list includes: arts and crafts supplies, electronic items like radios and video games, action figures, toy cars and trucks, personal grooming items for both boys and girls (aftershave, deodorant, cologne, make-up, combs, brushes, hair accessories, etc.), building block sets, blocks, stuffed animals, puzzles, dolls, baby toys, sports equipment, watches, cameras, jewelry, remote control cars, clothing accessories (hats, gloves, scarves, socks), wallets, purses and clothing, or even better, gift certificates to clothing stores.

The toys and gifts that you donate will be taken to Little Flower by our elves here at Dan's Papers. In order for them to select the perfect gift for each person we ask you not to wrap them, and only new gifts are accepted. The drop boxes are located within the following stores, so please take a moment to look around, you might find the perfect gift for a friend or family member or holiday outfit.

Shop 'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

The weeks are flying by and I am almost done with my Christmas shopping. How about you?

Look for the "Holiday Sale" at The John Rogers Collection: a "Giant Warehouse Clearance Sale." Stop in to the furniture outlet destination of the Hamptons for that special holiday gift. At John Rogers they are featuring handcrafted plantation teak reproductions of British and Dutch Colonial furniture along with their unique furniture, such as four poster beds, chests of drawers, dining chairs, coffee tables, occasional tables and accessories.

On Nugent Street at Titano's there is 50% off on merchandise. Now is the time to scoop up some fabulous looking shirts, ties, boys apparel and much more at great holiday savings.

Check out the big "Holiday Blowout Sale" at Gym Source on Windmill Lane in Southampton. All the top brand fitness equipment is priced 20% to 50% off. This is a hold-over sale and includes treadmills, steppers, bikes, multi-gyms, ellipticals, dumbbells and accessories. What a great holiday gift idea for someone who has just about everything.

At Pier 1 Imports in Southampton you get a great sense of the holidays with their "Holiday Gift Sale" that is going on right now. Look for savings from now until December 24. You can save 25% on all LiBien ornaments, 20% on all holiday dinerware, glassware, acrylicware and table linens. Great gift ideas like CD towers and holders, wine racks and wine tables, nautical compasses, photo trees, placecard holders and much more. This is one of my favorite stores. Come on over to my house and you'll see what I mean.

Why wait until the after-holiday sales when you can have it all now at Aesthetics Home Furnishings & Antiques. There are incredible savings of 50% off Christmas ornaments and holiday candles. Other holiday items are on sale, such as photo frames, and there is an overall 20% reduction on furniture and accessory items and lamps. Look for savings galore and shop for some of the best gifts for less. Located at Citarella Plaza in Watermill. Give them a call at 726-5381.

You can beat the holiday rush at the Hampton Coffee Company located on the Montauk Highway in Watermill. Look for 10% off on five or more baskets, special discounts for corporate orders and more. Also available for the tea and coffee lover are the "Tea Lover's" gift baskets and tea and coffee gift sets for under $20. You can also customize your own baskets or purchase great gifts separately. The small and medium gift baskets start at $25.99 and $39.99, plus shipping. For more information or to place an order call them at 726-2633.

At Lisan and Company in the Bridgehampton Commons, sort of opposite T.J. Maxx, there is a "Moving Sale" going on right now and will run right through December 31. This is a must-see, must-shop shop, with great country furniture, mirrors, and plenty of accessories. Stop in and I'll bet you that you will not come out empty-handed.

At the other end of the Bridgehampton Commons you cannot miss Razzano's, the Italian specialty store that has it all including high-style holiday gift baskets that are priced from $10 to $300. They feature a full line of Italian Christmas cakes, chocolates and confections and the two-pound box of Panatone is sale-priced at $4.99. A great idea for holiday gift giving are Razzano gift certificates. What a great idea! Also available, volume discounts and delivery for your holiday shopping convenience.

For a great stocking stuffer or gift topper, look for a new product out on the market called "Wearable Creatures", a line of stuffed animal scrunchies, wristbands and head bands by M-V Industries and Tanya Reins since 1998. These little creatures are availabe at Yolanda's in Hamptons Bays, The Colorado Teddy Bear Company on Rt. 58 and B.J.C. Cosmetics on Main Street in Riverhead. Affordable at $2.99 with the exception of the limited edition pieces which run between $10 and $12. The Christmas collection is ready for you right now and the 2001 collection will be available in Safari and Marine Life Creatures. These wearables are irresistible, you will probably find one to suit your very own personality. On a charitable note; a percentage of the proceeds from this collection will be donated to various "save the animal" groups. You can place an order by calling 329-4300.

Well off I go to chart my course for my next holiday shopping trip. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

SHEET MOSS TOPIARY

This topiary's natural beauty of sheet moss brings home a welcoming warmth and comfort during every season of the year.

Materials

Terra-cotta Pot, 4"
Dried Sheet Moss
Wood Sticks
Styrofoam Cone, 12"
Spray Adhesive, Super
Ribbon, 21"

1. Cut 3 inches off the bottom of the Styrofoam cone with scissors or a knife. 2. Cut bottom piece of Styrofoam to fit snugly inside the terra-cotta pot. Push the piece into the pot. 3. Gather sticks from fallen branches outside, then snap or cut with a saw to make 3-4 sticks the length of 6 inches. 4. Push stick down 1 inch into the center on the base. 5. Once all sticks are in the base, push the 9 inch Styrofoam cone down into the sticks leaving around 3 inches showing. 6. Spray all around the cone with spray adhesive. 7. Stick on pieces of dried sheet moss and push firmly until entire cone is covered. Some areas may need more sheet moss, so spray spot with spray adhesive and stick moss. 8. Spray the base Styrofoam with the spray adhesive and push moss down. 9. For the final touch tie a red ribbon around the sticks.

POTPOURRI PIE

Materials

9" Ceramic Plant Dish or Pie Tin
8 oz. bag of potpourri
2 81/2 X 11 off white felt
1 tablespoon light brown paint
10" Circle of Tulle or Meeting
Glue Gun, Glue sticks

1. Fill ceramic dish with a mountain of potpourri. It's a good idea to pick a potpourri that smells like a pie, not flowers. I picked apple cinnamon. 2. Cover entire dish with tulle to hold potpourri in place 3. Pull tulle lightly and hot glue it down around the rim of the dish. 4. Cut off excess tulle around the dish. 5. Cut felt into 1 inch by 11 inches wavy strips 6. Basket weave strips on top of the potpourri dish. 7. Hot glue strips of felt to the rim of the dish. 8. Wait a few minutes for the glue to set, then cut off excess felt. 9. Glue felt down for pie crust rim. 10. Sponge paint light brown paint sporadically on felt. 11. For a final touch you can sprinkle real cinnamon on it, it will stick to felt and give your pie great aroma.

Tweeds Restaurant & Buffalo Bar
17 East Main Street Riverhead
631-208-3151

Back in 1896, John J. Sullivan, a cousin of the famous prizefighter, John L. Sullivan, opened his hotel on Main Street in Riverhead. Now, at that time, Riverhead was a very political town and was the county seat of Suffolk County. The hotel became one of the main centers of New York City politics and intrigues until the 20s when the decline of Tammany Hall began. Prominent politicians such as Al Smith and Charles Murphy were among the regular visitors to the tavern which, it is said, managed to keep operating during the years of Prohibition.

Recently, the hotel ran as the Bull and Bear, until the building suffered a fire last year. The building was owned by Ed Tuccio, a well-known local businessman and property developer. Ed had wanted to own a restaurant for sometime and he enlisted another business friend, Don Reeve, to come in as a partner in renovating and restoring the place. They started their work in March of this year and just over a month ago, the new John J. Sullivan Hotel and Tweed's Restaurant & Buffalo Bar opened its doors for business. Don told me that the choice of the name 'Tweed's' refers to the links to the famous (or infamous – depending on your view point) Boss Tweed.

Entering the restaurant, either by the Main Street front entrance, or from the rear car park and its canopied entrance, you immediately feel that you are, indeed, going back in time. The impressive polished bar is a focal point of the room which has well spaced tables, many of which still have the original chairs. They installed an antique working fireplace and the walls are covered with interestingly evocative photos of long ago Riverhead and its surroundings and also its people. To cap it off, on a wall beside the bar is a massive buffalo head with an accompanying plaque which informs the reader that this animal had the 'honor' of being shot by Teddy Roosevelt in 1883 and was one of the last of the wild bison to be shot in the US. Don Reeve told us that the head had been given to the Boy Scouts and was, for many years, at the camp at Baiting Hollow and that one day Ed Tuccio happened to be there and saw that the head had been put out for disposal so he rescued it.

Ed Tuccio has a particular affinity for bison because he raises them on his farm in Riverhead where he has about fifty head. Naturally, bison is now always a featured item on the menu, as Nancy, our server, told us, together with information about the healthiness of the meat because it has such a low fat and calorie content compared to other meats.

We started our meal with a couple of their featured soups: the Long Island clam chowder was made from a light broth without any cream or tomato and the sea taste of the clams really came through in this soup. The soup of the day was acorn squash and this arrived pureed to perfection. It had a very delicately seasoned taste and we both thoroughly enjoyed it. This got the meal off to a very good start, because it is often said that you can judge a restaurant very quickly by the quality of its soups and bread basket. On both counts Tweed's came through with flying colors.

From the selection of appetizers, we chose oysters casino which were shucked and roasted with peppers, bacon and herbs. This blended the slightly smoky bacon flavor with the plump oysters. Baked Moriches clams were also extremely good and had a lot of clam meat mixed with the correct amount of seasonings and just lightly breaded.

Tweed's has a good wine list, with Long Island wineries being well represented and available by the glass or bottle. Prices are very reasonable, with an Australian Chardonnay at $14 and Long Island wines ranging from $18 to $30. Hugh Ely is the knowledgeable and very enthusiastic keeper of the bar and he told us that he is keen to have the widest possible selection of local wines.

The chef at Tweed's is Bob Santoro, who has been cooking for some 17 years. He also is a lecturer at Suffolk Community College. He told us that his plan is to change the menu every three months but bison and local fish will always be available. We went on to try the fish of the day, a pan seared striped bass served with artichoke hearts, capers and red peppers. We both agreed that this was equal to any striped bass we had ever eaten and the blend of flavors really complemented the very fresh fish. The only negative note was that the garlic potato served with the fish did not add to the visual appeal or taste of the dish and small roasted potatoes would have been better suited to really complete the enjoyment of a superb piece of fish, very well cooked.

Naturally, bison had to be sampled and Nancy told us that it has to be cooked either medium rare or rare because of its low fat content. We took her advice and were rewarded with some exceptional tasting, very tender slices of meat. The smoked mushroom cognac creme which accompanied the meat was delicate and the crisp potato wedges were excellent.

Diana Alardi is the pastry chef and she was trained at the Cordon Blue school in London. Apart from the home made desserts, she features Briermere pies and Famous Amos cheesecake on the menu. We opted for the creme brulee, a good test for dessert quality and found it good but uneven in temperature and the creme could have been slightly thicker. The chocolate decadent cake will satisfy the most rabid chocaholic.

Over coffee we chatted with Laurel Feerich, who is the General Manager and she told us about the original windows and door, hidden under sheet rock, they came across during the renovation work. She also took us on a tour of the three bedrooms they currently have opened, together with a small but comfortable guest lounge. They have taken pains to make the rooms comfortable but in a style in keeping with the general atmosphere of the establishment.

Recommendation.

Ten years ago, downtown Riverhead looked to be on its last legs. Luckily, the people and the town did not let this happen. New attractions, such as the Atlantis Aquarium together with the hopefully soon to be re-opened theatre on Main Street, continue to help the resurgence.

Tweed's is another very welcome addition. It is a charming restaurant which offers well cooked, reasonably priced food. Soups are $4, Appetizers range from $5 to $7 and main course from $15 to $24. The fact that they allowed us to make this visit just four weeks after opening was truly an act of faith. The restaurant is efficiently run and the waitstaff helpful and friendly.

Have lunch or dinner at Tweed's where nostalgia is alive and well. Time will tell if it will, once again, become a haunt of politicians but even if it does - don't let that put you off!

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

KOSHER

Several weeks ago I was relaxing in my den reading one of my favorite automobile magazines, Thoroughbred And Classic Cars, which is a monthly English magazine dedicated to collector automobiles.The magazine takes automobile collecting and restoring seriously, and is written with a British flavor(flavour?!) which is quite colorful. The British, when referring to, let's say, a Shelby Mustang, would perhaps discuss the car in the following manner: When road testing this Yank Tank, which was powered by a brutish V-8, we were terribly amused by the long bonnet stretching out before our eyes, quite unlike anything built here or on the continent. But, by jove, the car is jolly quick, even though it lacks pedigree.

You could imagine my surprise, when in an article about the authenticity of a valuable Bentley, the author referred to the restoration as not being "kosher" in reference to a bogus part on the car that was not original. I couldn't believe that the expression "kosher" was being used in this uppity British car mag, especially when relating to one of the most hallowed names in the world of automobiles.

Over the years, I've come across many things in the world of automobiles that struck me as not being kosher, some of them annoying,some quite amusing, and a few downright dangerous.

Take, for instance, all the cars we see on the road that are phony convertibles: hard tops with fabric roofs over them. Some of the more clever designs even have make-believe top bows under the fabric, to further fool the eye. I must admit even I've been conned by these fakes, and have often wondered why anyone would want a car with this configuration. Does it make the owner feel cooler or younger because he's in what is historically considered to be a "swinging kids machine"? I just think it's a little weird to drive a bogus convertible, and certainly not kosher.

I was at the Nurburg Ring race track in Germany for what they call "old timers" day, where all of the finest vintage race cars in Europe gather for some high speed "show and tell". It was a sensory overload to see the most magnificent race cars in the world in the flesh, running at top speed on this famous track. The one sight I found amusing was that of a 427 Cobra that was unpainted, and so was being shown in bare aluminum. I wondered if the car's owner had not had time to paint the car, or that he had left it unpainted to show the world that it was not a replica. ( It seems today that the 427 Ford Cobra is the most copied car in the world.) A short while after I was at the "Ring", I was at the Bridgehampton Race track for another event, and sitting in the pits was another beautiful restored 427 Cobra. It was dark blue, with white racing stripes and had the correct instruments and even the original Halibrand knock-off wheels. It was right in every way. Upon closer inspection, mainly by looking at the thickness of the material inside the fender wells, I realized that this car was a fiberglass replica, the best I'd ever seen. Great looking Cobra, but it just wasn't kosher. No replica is.

Several years ago, I was driving from Germany to France, running really fast on the Autobahn, which has no speed limit. I was averaging about 135 miles per hour, and when I entered Belgium (which has a speed limit), I kept up this pace on the highway. Most of the cars were driving much above the 80 mile per hour Belgium limit, so I didn't feel like a blatant scofflaw. To be totally honest, there is really nothing quite as enjoyable as driving a really fast car the way it was designed to be driven. As I was bulleting along, a black Volvo four door got right on my tail, and kept up with my speed. I was surprised that a Volvo 240 could even go that fast, and decided to show him what a Mercedes 500 could really do. I punched the throttle, and as my speedometer needle was creeping towards 150 miles per hour, in my rear view mirror I sighted something definitely un-kosher! The two guys in the Volvo (which was rapidly falling behind) were putting on hats. For a brief second I was dumbfounded, until the hidden red lights in the Volvo's grill started flashing.They were Belgium police. The moral here is when driving fast in any part of the world, if a car gets behind you that doesn't look kosher, slow down. ( To this day, I don't know how that bloody nerd Volvo went so fast!) Final note: Beware of non-kosher cars on the LIE!

POLLOCK- KRASNER HOUSE ART TOUR TO PARIS AND THE COTE D'AZUR

The Pollock – Krasner House is pleased to announce a very special Spring art tour to Paris and the Cote d'Azur. While this will be its third yearly excursion (past trips have included St. Ives and Brighton, England), the Pollock-Krasner House promises an exciting itinerary, covering traditional, modern and contemporary art works.

On the Cote d'Azur, enjoy custom-designed visits to superbly sited museums, studios, and chateaux of such renowned artists as Picasso, Matisse, Leger and Chagall (his famous stained glass windows). Experience the region's outstanding seafood and beautiful Riviera resorts as well as charming villages while staying in Nice.

In Paris, relish visits to such well-known art centers as The Louvre, Les Halles and the Pompidou Center. Enjoy a bus tour of Paris and a walking tour of Marais, a 14th Century neighborhood with its new-generation artists and galleries in converted mansions. And what trip to Paris would be complete without a boat cruise down the Seine?

The tour dates are May 7-17, 2001, leaving from New York's JFK Airport. It will be conducted by Marion Wolberg Weiss, art critic for Dan's Papers.

Please call the Pollock-Krasner House at 631-324-4929 for additional information and for deadlines. Space is limited, so call early.

Are you having an event? Let everyone know about it in Dan's Papers. Send events to editorial@danspapers.com or fax to 537-3330

Frozen Pipes – Costly As Well As Inconvenient

After last winter's weather, I'm sure none of you escaped hearing the words "frozen pipes," uttered either by a neighbor or yourself; a phrase most likely surrounded by a stream of expletives. As many earth science graduates may remember, water freezes at 32 degrees, and unfortunately, that includes water in your household pipes. When water does freeze, there is an expansion of approximately 4% in size, this is how frozen pipes lead to "broken pipes," an even more dreaded phrase.

What you may not have heard last winter is that frozen pipe damage accounts for over $450 million in property damage each year, and that water damages from ruptured water hoses and pipes are the third most frequently filed homeowner claim in America today.

Hearing these statistics, and understanding the fact that a homes plumbing system represent an investment of about 15% of the total value of the home, may incite local folks to learn a few easy steps to try and ward off any possible wintertime damage.

Keeping this in mind, the upcoming information may be some that you would like to clip out and put on the refrigerator for reference, in addition to your favorite plumber's phone number.

The key to preventing damage is to keep pipes from freezing in the first place. Most susceptible are pipes that run along exterior walls, are in unheated cabinets, closets, and any pipes that run through improperly insulated crawlspaces.

To try and prevent frozen pipes, the following suggestions may help:

•Eliminate drafts, repair broken glass in basements and attics, be sure spaces are adequately insulated, and have a tight seal around all exterior windows and doors.

•Have low-temp sensors installed through your security company to alert you when temperatures inside the home are dangerously low.

•Wrap uninsulated pipes with foam, self-adhesive insulating tape, or have electrified "heat tape" wrapped around pipes.

•Keep doors ajar to rooms that contain pipes, including closets, cabinets and under sinks, this allows warmed air to circulate more thoroughly.

• If possible, beam a small heater or lamp at vulnerable pipes

•Winterize all outside faucets, as well as irrigation and pool systems.

It is also a good idea to have the whole family know where the water main shut off valve is, in case a pipe breaks and it is necessary to turn off the water in a hurry. If you would like to seriously reduce the chance of frozen pipes, and you are planning on not living full time in your Hamptons residence, you could consider draining all the pipes in the house, shutting off water pumps and the main shutoff valve.

In addition to these ideas, many homeowners prefer to hire a "housewatcher." This is someone who will check on the inside of your home once or twice a week to look for any damages, to verify that the heat is at an appropriate level for the conditions, to close any forgotten windows and doors, and some will even turn off and on the house's main water supply if necessary.

Having blocked or restricted water flow at a faucet is the first sign that a frozen pipe problem may be present. Of course, calling a professional plumber would be my first suggestion at the sign of frozen pipes, but there are some steps you can take yourself to minimize damage before a professional can be contacted.

When a pipe is suspected of being frozen, open the faucet and leave it open; the flow of water may help thaw the frozen obstruction. At this point, should you try to thaw the pipe yourself – be aware of the dangers- do not use any extreme methods of heat (i.e. a blowtorch). You should also determine if a break has occurred in the pipe already, if so, it must be repaired before any thawing is attempted, a flaming fire or raging flood is not a good tradeoff for a frozen pipe.

If you attempt to thaw a frozen pipe, know that you must work from the frozen area back towards the water supply- working from the faucet area to the frozen part. Also, try using a variety of methods to heat the area, never concentrate on any one spot, and keep the heat circulating.

To try and thaw a frozen pipe, the following ideas may help:

•An electric hair dryer

• A heat lamp, shine an infrared heat lamp directly on the suspected area.

•A space heater directed to the affected spot.

•An electric blanket wrapped around the pipe.

•A vacuum cleaner's exhaust

WINTER SHOW AT LIZAN TOPS

Group shows that feature gallery artists work best at the end of the year, and the current one at East Hampton's Lizan Tops is a good example. Viewers get a chance to see a particular gallery's focus and philosophy; works which we have missed during the summer season are often presented again. And perhaps most importantly, we have one more opportunity to experience a favorite artist's endeavors.

Patton Miller's large mixed media piece is especially eye-catching, bringing to the forefront a cultural focus, one that is unique among the other works. Thus, its style, form and Hispanic subject matter give a special diversity to the exhibit.

Gouachs by Dan Rizzi remind us of his speciality as well, his collages on paper recalling diversity with its folk art tradition. Cynthia Knott's oil paintings are always a pleasure to experience, their aesthetic, formal qualities evoking a mysticism we can never quite explain. Donna Levinstone's pastel, "Cloud Sweep," Lois Gold's landscapes and Ken Robbins' photographs all remind us of these same qualities.

"Tulip Storm" by James Guppy

Small works by James Guppy, painted on embroidery hoops, are also mysterious and like Mr. Rizzi's homage to America's past. They are mysterious, too, like Ms. Knott's paintings. Even so, they have their own particular appeal, a surrealistic thrust which is both beautiful and bothersome.

A large iris clings to a huge wave; a tulip floats adrift in calm waters despite a stormy sky. We yearn to know what Mr. Guppy has in mind The images are what dreams are made of— and they stay with us.

Rex Lau's leaf series is also mysterious in its simplicity and subtlety. The images force us to remember our own past, our own trees and leaves. Other works also evoke emotions, like Whitney Hansen's "Low Tide," recalling cherished family moments from the distant past.

As always, Diane Mayo's ceramics are joyful, evoking the pleasures of the past, present and future.

The current show will be at Lizan Tops until December 30.

Honoring the Artist: Terry Lewis

Artist Terry Lewis (Goldberg) is a woman of many talents, managing to put all these talents to work as she pursued her passion for painting. While studying art at Manhattan's Music and Art High School may have gotten Ms. Lewis started on her present path, the attaining of other skills became just as important along the way.

For example, receiving her Masters' Degree in Television at New York University, Ms. Lewis moved from there to a career in TV, doing set design, graphics and then becoming a producer. It's apparent in her current work that Ms. Lewis' visual sense and management skills have been well served.

Managing her own company, The Westport Gift Catalog, is a case in point where Ms. Lewis creates and designs such items as T-shirts, mugs, watches, postcards, and limited edition prints. Naturally, her paintings are also included, many of which are also featured on her "Season's Greetings" cards.

This week's cover painting, "Sledding," is one such card. Although it's not a scene from this area but rather from Greeen's Farm School in Connecticut, it could just as well evoke any number of local settings. Typical of Ms. Lewis' work, it includes family members (often her daughter, Abbye) engaged in a joyful activity.

Ms. Lewis paints a variety of scenes set in diverse places: a Westport parade; an East Hampton's windmill; and a Boca Raton street. But whether it's summer or winter, a building or figures, there are similarities among her pieces— Ms. Lewis' penchant for a folk-art style, her respect for times/places possessing both "character" and a past.

It's also apparent that Ms. Lewis likes to connect to the communities she is painting, enhancing their particular spirits. "I used to paint landscape," she explains, "but I'm now more in touch with people in my work."

Ms. Lewis' connection with people represents another facet of her talents and skills. She has some of her work hanging in Sloan Kettering, and she has donated her time to such charitable organizations as The Women's Crisis Center.

Ms. Lewis' love of people includes her family, too. She's not only encouraging her daughter to paint, but her husband, Steven, as well. And her connection to the community will take on an additional dimension when she offers a course for children this winter at Guild Hall.

As Ms. Lews is quick to point out, she likes painting "slices of life." But that "life" encompasses so much more than what appears on the canvas.

– Marion Wolberg Weiss

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

The Grinch • 102 Dalmations

HOW HOLLYWOOD TRIED TO STEAL CHRISTMAS

Long before Macy's Department Store buried a stake of holly, with a large price tag attached, into hearts full of Christmas Cheer, Dickens' A Christmas Carol set the plum pudding mold of Christmas as we know and practice it today. Then, the jolly "A Visit From St. Nicholas" put Santa into the driver's seat and, with bags full of Macy's stuff, we ride sky-high. In 1957, Dr. Seuss combined the Dickens and St. Nick fables in his own fantastic, yet gentle, way to remind us of the less commercial vision of Christmas. For this, he created The Grinch, a hairy, green Scrooge, who is so mean, he will deny the holiday to the town of Whoville, which he despises. The good Doctor's simple and fragile book was, in 1966, made into a fine short animation narrated by Boris Karloff, who gave it the right Seuss warmth and Grinch self-loathing, mean greediness. Which takes us to Hollywood and its long, sticky, dollar-green fingers that have finally snatched the property . . . and Christmas. If their massive print, radio and TV advertising and publicity campaign has its way... it will be a Grinch Christmas.

GRINCH BEATEN WITH JIM CAREY SCHTICK

The campaign's cost is generated by Jim Carrey, as the Grinch, and his Box Office cash-back power. The movie, with Carey in the fuzzy, green suit, is the product of the "fuzzy math," over-used in the other big campaign. He made possible a $100 million-plus budget dumped onto Seuss' wise and tender creation which has just about squashed its true life. For starters, Carey is Carey first... the Grinch is along for only a very bumpy, lumpy, over-produced totally fake rendering of plastic, latex, Styrofoam and polyester. It takes a lot to make them look more artificial and therefore less to stultify the story's meaning. Carey intimidated the director, Ron Howard, who has usually been sensitive and purposeful. Carey's very familiar, over-bearing persona dominates the characterization . . . his ad-libs constitute just about all of his script and, except for the movie's quite joyous finale, casts an itchy blotch over an already irritating mess of flaky props, gadgets, Planet of the Apes-like Whoville folk, an over-sentimental little heroine, a sex interest! for the Grinch, and general ill-will. A green Grinch Christmas instead of a White Christmas? Anyone...?

HOLIDAY MOVIES GOING TO THE DOGS

A dog, Max, was added to all the gobble-de-gook in The Grinch and luckily adds some humanity. It follows that it's the canine cast of 102 Dalmations that makes the movie safe and giggly. Glen Close is a riot, as is her costuming, but the rest of the film is as spotty as an old $1.98 tie. It even had to include a scene from Disney's animation, Lady and the Tramp, for romance. Movies had heart then.

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

This past weekend was packed with activity. The holidays are coming and everyone is in great spirits. The Stoli party at Bobby Van's was especially great on Friday. Some of those drinks were incredible. They've already decorated for the season and the atmosphere is so nice and warm.

Also went to a movie screening at Indian Cove in Hampton Bays which was fun as well. The surfing was a change from the chilly weather outside. Have another great weekend and remember to be extra safe this time of year.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Quills (-)

Never in a million years would I have thought that a movie about the life of the Marquis de Sade would put me to sleep. This one did, at least got me dozing. It was a bore.

I went because of the possibilities that presented themselves at the mention of his name. And, I was urged on by Elvis Mitchell's rave review in The New York Times. Mitchell reported: "Fortunately, the elegance of Mr. Kaufman's direction and his handling of the cast make for the kind of euphoric stylishness that has been missing from moviegoing for some time."

The movie covers the last few years of the Marquis de Sade's life when he was locked up in an institution for the insane. He is played by Geoffrey Rush of Shine fame. Kate Winslett plays Madeleine, a beauty who provides the inmates with bed linens and who is lusted after by them.

The abbé in charge of the institution is Coulmier, played by Joaquin Phoenix. He is a kind man until pushed to the brink by acts of Sade and by the cruelty of Dr. Royer-Collard (Michael Caine). Dr. Royer-Collard is placed in charge of the institution by the government fearing too much kindness is being extended to the prisoners.

The movie certainly had promise, but no follow through when it came to sex. The relationships between the parties, while occasionally interesting, were more often boring. The movie in presentation was more deranged than the principal character.

Dan's Papers

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Saturday December 9th at the Ross School Library at 3 PM

19 Goodfriend Drive (off Route 114) East Hampton

CUDDILY WATER MILL A STAGE FOR CHILLING, CHURNING DRAMA OF TWISTED SEX, SADISM AND BONDAGE (NOT TO MENTION) A FEW MURDERS.

We're BACK! Dan's Papers FREE Film Festival returns to the Ross School's sumptuously, medium-size screen with more chills, spills, pills, thrills, windmills, flared nostrils and romantic entwining tendrils! Yes, sir-ree-bob! This week's movie has 'em all.

Suppose you find a naked blonde lady hanging around the house who looks like a Playboy model. Not bad, you say... just a kind of typical Hampton weekend guest. But, suppose she's hanging by the neck from a ceiling light fixture? That's Bad! That's a typical scene from WHISPERS IN THE DARK, a 1992 naked spell, wrist and ankle binding murder mystery of the whodunit type. If you have no hang-ups and are not turned off by women hanging from turned on light fixtures, run to the Ross School Library, but, first, phone for reservations to Dan's Papers, 537-0500 as a lot of people will want to see Alan Alda involved in a movie that drags blood and pyschopathia sexualis from a very kinky maintenance room in Manhattan's "Tavern On The Green" to Hampton grassy dunes gone berserk in Mr. Alda's own peaceful Lionel Train model town of Water Mill.

As produced by Marty Bregman and written and directed by Christopher Crow, WHISPERS IN THE DARK shouts loudly for attention with sensational scenes of bondage and sadism. They try to muffle the pandering with a satin comforter of shiny glamour and analytical observation, so, much of it comes off like earlier television mystery shows, but spiked with explicitiveness not yet allowed on the tube. The link to television, I think, is one of the film's producers, William Link, who created a long chain of those very popular TV series, like Columbo.

Whispers in the Dark

On the screen we first see a writhing nude that turns out to be a troublesome dream, soon to become a nightmare of psychiatrist Ann Hecker, darkly played by Annabella Sciorra. The girl of her dreams is her patient, Eve, played with bare honesty by Deborah Unger. She has been tempting Ann with mind twisting stories of being strung up by her wrists and neck for fun and games. She also wants to strip her body bare as well as her mind for Ann . . .and does! Another patient, Johnny C., an ex-con/bad-boy/weirdo has turned to psychiatry and painting angelic nudes (what else) to adjust. His nudes are strung up and slashed from here to you know where. He is forcefully done by John Leguizamo. Ann is losing her grip, and her boyfriend, so she turns to her university mentor and good friend, Dr. Leo Green and his wife, Sarah, caringly played by Alan Alda and Jill Clayburgh. Then she falls madly in love with a tough-looking, but tender pilot who owns his own airplane. He could be Mr. Wright. Not Orville. His name is actually Doug, and he is played with a prominent nose by James Sheridan. But, when Eve is found hanging like a chandelier, Ann thinks Doug dunnit. On the other hand, Detective Morgenstern, played by Anthony LaPaglia thinks Johnny C. did it. Johnny C. gets angry and tries to decorate Ann's body with a razor. But, she still thinks Doug dood it... but no... maybe her ex-boyfriend did it. Maybe it was the detective. Personally, I think William Link did it in the study with a typewriter.

Now to review the film's beach house in Water Mill. It's your basic beach place, minimally decorated with a frenzied guest or two, contemporary furniture, a few antiques, and cooked fresh corn on the dinner table. No, it isn't Mr. Alda's own house. He know better than to rent a house for a thriller... it get's wrecked.

To top off all this, we'll screen a short video by a Ross School student and... there'll be fruit, cheeses and juices. See you, Saturday. We'll talk as calmly as possible or, possibly wreck the place.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

A whirl of holiday parties; last minute shopping; marathon cookie-baking sessions; they can only mean one thing. It's holiday time!

There isn't time to do everything and you don't have to bake 12 different kinds of cookies, write personalized cards to everyone you ever knew and go to every party. But it is a time of sharing holiday gifts – and cookies always seem to head the list.

In a recent issue of the famous food magazine, Food & Wine, I came across an interview with Maida Heatter on baking cookies. Maida Heatter, of course, is the baking guru who has written numerous cook books on cakes and cookies. Here are some of the valuable tips she shared with Food & Wine. She finds many recipes too sweet and so will cut back on the sugar amount suggested in the recipe. She has never found it to affect the baking time or consistency of the cookie. I concur wholeheartedly since I find most baked goods too sweet. Maida suggests using Land O' Lakes unsalted butter in preference to some French types. A very important point from Maida is to use aluminum baking sheets and to avoid light-weight ones. She also lines her baking sheets with parchment paper to assure that your cookies will have golden bottoms. She even admits to having burned cookies when she lost track of the timer. Another great tip from Maida is to freeze cookie dough for later use. She never found that freezing the dough hurt it.

So get started with some of your own favorites or some tried and true ones from Silvia's kitchen. And remember, the one thing that everyone who has everything doesn't have is something homemade from you.

MEXICAN CHOCOLATE MERINGUES

Remember that meringues are affected by the humidity in the air. It's best to bake them on a cool, dry and crisp day.

1 cup slivered almonds
1 cup sugar
5 tablespoons Dutch-process cocoa powder
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 large egg whites
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
1/4 teaspoon pure almond extract
1 1/2 ounces semisweet or bittersweet chocolate (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line two large cookie sheets with parchment paper.

1. Toast almonds on a baking sheet, stirring occasionally, 5-8 minutes, until lightly toasted. Let cool. Reduce oven temperature to 200 degrees.

2. In a food processor, pulse toasted almonds with 1/3 cup sugar until finely chopped, add cocoa, cornstarch and cinnamon and pulse just until mixed.

3. Beat egg whites in bowl of electric mixer or with hand-held electric beaters on low speed just until foamy. Add cream of tartar, increase speed to medium and beat until soft peaks form. Gradually add remaining 2/3 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, beating until whites are firm with moist peaks. Add vanilla, and almond extract and beat just until blended.

4. In 2 additions, gently fold the cocoa mixture into the beaten egg whites, just until blended (a few streaks of white may remain).

5. Drop heaping tablespoons of batter one-inch apart on prepared baking sheets or pipe the batter through a pastry bag with a 1/2-inch plain tip. Place in oven on two middle racks, alternating pans halfway through baking time. Turn off oven, and without opening oven door, allow meringues cool in oven for 1 hour. Lift meringue drops with a spatula and transfer to a rack.

6. If desired, melt chocolate in a small bowl set over a pan of warm water on low heat, and stir to mix. With a teaspoon, drizzle the melted chocolate over the top of the meringues. Allow to dry then store in tightly closed containers for up to 5 days.

OATMEAL RAISIN COOKIES

These addictive cookies were offered to guests at tea-time when I visited an Inn on Prince Edward Island this past summer. The manager happily supplied me with the recipe.
Makes about 42-46 cookies

3/4 cup all-purpose flour
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3/4 cup unsalted butter, softened
3/4 cup granulated sugar
3/4 cup packed light brown sugar
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
2 teaspoons vanilla
3 cups uncooked quick-cooking or old-fashioned oats
1 cup raisins

For the glaze
3/4 cup powdered sugar
3 tablespoons milk, any kind
1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly grease cookie sheets and line with parchment paper.

1. Combine flour, salt, baking soda and cinnamon in a small bowl.

2. In electric stand mixer or large bowl with electric hand mixer whip butter and both sugars and beat until ingredients are thoroughly incorporated. Add flour mixture and beat at low speed just until blended. With a large wooden spoon, stir in oats and raisins until well mixed.

3. Drop 1 tablespoon of dough 2 inches apart onto prepared cookie sheets. Place cookie sheet on middle rack in oven and bake for 10-11 minutes or until edges are golden brown. Bake second sheet as above. Let cookies stand 2-3 minutes on cookie sheet. Then transfer to wire racks to cool completely.

4. For the glaze, stir powdered sugar, milk and vanilla until smooth. Drizzle glaze over each cookie with a fork or spoon. Cookies can be stored in a tightly covered container for up to 3 months.

CHOCOLATE AND PEANUT BUTTER CHIP COOKIES

The standard chocolate chip cookie is one of the easiest to make and is even more delectable with the addition of peanut butter chips.
Yield: 3 1/2 - 4 dozen

2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
8 ounces (2 sticks) unsalted butter at room temperature
1/2 cup granulated sugar
3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 eggs
12 ounces semi-sweet chocolate chips
10 ounces peanut butter chips

Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Lightly grease cookie sheets and line with parchment paper.

1. Combine flour, baking soda and salt in a medium bowl and stir to mix. Set aside.

2. In a mixing bowl with electric hand mixer or in bowl of stand mixer, cream butter and sugar until fluffy. Add vanilla and mix. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition, until thoroughly incorporated.

3. Add flour mixture to the egg mixture on low speed, a little at a time, and, scraping down sides of bowl with a rubber spatula, beat until ingredients are thoroughly incorporated. Remove bowl from stand mixer if using, and fold in the chips, one package at a time.

4. Drop batter by well-rounded teaspoonfuls 2 inches apart onto greased cookie sheets. Bake in preheated oven for 8-10 minutes until lightly browned. Let cookies stand for a few seconds then transfer to a rack to cool and crisp. Continue as above with remaining batter. Store cookies in a tightly covered container.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

The Laundry
31 Race Lane East Hampton
631-324-3199

Since the turn of the twentieth century the building which now houses The Laundry restaurant functioned as the East Hampton Steam Laundry. Twenty years ago, Leif Hope, a well known local artist, saw a future for a restaurant; at that time East Hampton was not the hot bed of eating places that it is today. Leif enlisted the services of Norman Jaffe, a noted local architect to design the interior and then approached Bill Bonbrest Sr., to come into the business and run the restaurant. As time went on The Laundry became the eating home for many of the artists and writers living in the Hamptons and indeed twenty of the regulars also became limited partners in the restaurant. The famous annual Writers and Artists softball game had its origins here and The Laundry still sponsors the event each year, as Bill Bonbrest Jr., who now manages the restaurant, told me.

Bill's father died in the early 90s and he and his sister inherited the restaurant but after a few years he sold his share to his brother in law, Stuart Kreisler and then was away from the restaurant until May of this year, when he returned to manage The Laundry and also their sister restaurant, 95 School Street, in Bridgehampton.

As we entered the restaurant on a cold wet evening, we immediately were struck by the charm and warmth of the restaurant, which is simply but elegantly furnished with exposed brick walls, strategically placed mirrors and soft beige tones setting off the crisply laid dining tables with their candles. There also was a blazing fire, with some welcoming armchairs placed around it.

After talking a while with Bill and meeting Executive Chef, Andrew Engle, we settled down and started our meal with The Laundry chowder, which had a very clean taste with a hint of paprika giving a little bite to the soup. The soup was rich in clams and vegetables and was an excellent soup for a chill autumn evening. The bread basket was filled with hot home-baked crusty bread which we forced our selves to enjoy in moderation.

The salad of organic beets with a warm goat cheese flan and black walnut vinaigrette was a blend of very delicate but intense flavors and had exactly the correct amount of dressing to balance the dish. Marinated sardines were accompanied by haricots verts, endive, tomato and red onion together with a grilled naan bread. The sardines were very fresh and very reminiscent of being in Portugal. As we continued though the meal, we were becoming more and more aware that this was turning out to be a very special evening. The jumbo lump crab cake served with avocado salsa and chipotle vinaigrette was superb with an abundance of crab meat and the accompaniments allowed you to tune the spiciness of the dish to your own desire. From this we moved on to try the Belon oysters and these were incredibly fresh and plump and required no dressing other than a squeeze of lemon to provide a full appreciation of their succulence.

The Laundry has an extensive and sensibly priced wine list, although it would be nice to see a wider selection of our Long Island wines. From the wines available by the glass, we tried the Pinot Grigio and the French Chardonnay, both of which were good examples of these wines and complemented the dishes.

For the main course we had wild striped bass grilled and served with sweet corn pudding, tomatoes, lemon confit and basil. The fish was perfectly cooked and one of the best presentations of striped bass we have ever had. To follow I had ordered calf's liver, a dish not too often seen on menus here but a European favorite. To me, liver is one of the simplest but yet one of the most difficult dishes and it is one I would be diffident about ordering unless I was pretty confident about the standard of a restaurant. The first essential is for the liver to be impeccably fresh and then it must never be overcooked. Andrew Engle served the sautéed liver with the outside slightly crisp and the inside still delicately tender. Topped with caramelized onions and served with garlic mashed potatoes it was a dish we both savored to the full.

When we moved onto the dessert stage of our meal, we asked Bill to let us taste a selection of their offerings. If reading about lemon verbena panna cotta with roasted figs, sticky toffee date cake with vanilla ice cream, and pumpkin cheese cake with ginger snap crust makes you salivate, it should, because these desserts, produced by Laura Donnelly, aptly described on the menu as the 'Pastry Goddess', were all exquisite and above all light, full of flavor and not overpowering.

Recommendation.

The Laundry is a charming restaurant which is very well run with pleasant professional staff and an excellent executive chef and pastry chef. There is a very relaxed but sophisticated atmosphere which makes the restaurant a very good choice for business meetings or for romantic trysts (for the latter try the oysters!).

The Laundry has a very good value three course Prix Fixe menu with a commendable range of choices for $27. Salads and appetizers range from $7 to $13 and main dishes from $15 to $32. Desserts are from $6 to $8. The restaurant is open seven days a week from 5.30 till 11pm.

As we sipped a cup of good coffee and reflected on the evening, we both agreed this was a meal of the highest quality and this is a restaurant which immediately goes on to our 'very best' list.

Healthy Eating for the Holidays

The holiday season is upon us and with it comes all of the office parties, family gatherings and celebrations with friends that we look forward to all year long. Along with all the fun, we also manage to add a few extra pounds as we indulge in cookies, hors d'oeuvres and other treats that we may find it easier to avoid during the rest of year. This season, follow a few healthy hints and avoid having to make those New Year's resolutions to shed holiday pounds. Following these suggestions will also lower your risk of developing cancer and will help you to enjoy a longer, healthier life.

1. Before going out to a cocktail party, drink several 8 oz. glasses of water and, if you are really hungry, eat a piece of fruit or some raw vegetable sticks, such as carrot, celery or bell pepper. At the party, avoid bowls of salted nuts and head, instead, for the crudities platter. Just remember to stay away from the dip!

2. During family get-togethers, encourage family members to join you outside for a game on the lawn, a hike through the woods or a walk around the neighborhood. Take every opportunity you can to be physically active and you will feel better as well as avoid those extra pounds.

3. Limit alcohol consumption, especially cocktails containing cream or a lot of sugar, such as White Russians and Whiskey Sours. Head to the punch bowl instead, especially if it contains a wine-based or fruit-based punch and, my all means, avoid the eggnog! Spiked or not. Hot mulled cider is a great alternative to alcohol and has the added benefit of making you feel full because it is warm.

4. Avoid the "fat-free" trap. Those fat-free chips and pretzels still have lots of CALORIES! Dip into the salsa with carrot and celery sticks: they satisfy because they are crunchy and contain lots of water. But steer clear of the guacamole and queso, even if they are supposedly "fat-free."

5. Finally, create opportunities to celebrate that are not centered around eating. Build a snowman if the weather is right or plan a trip into the city or out into the country. Go biking or hiking if the weather is mild or skating or sledding if it snows. Give thanks for family and friends and celebrate just by enjoying each other's company.

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Did you know...

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among women ages 40-59. It is the leading cancer site among American women and is second only to lung cancer in cancer deaths. During the year 2000, 182,800 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and 40,800 women will die of breast cancer.

The most proven and significant risk factors are being female and getting older. The majority of women with breast cancer have no known significant family history or other known risk factors. Only 5-10% of breast cancers are due to heredity. Most women who are diagnosed with breast cancer survive the disease. If detected early, breast cancer is a curable disease.

Early detection and treatment offer the best chance currently available for surviving breast cancer. The following steps are recommended:

- Annual screening mammography beginning by age 40 and continuing throughout your life.
- Clinical breast examination at least every 3 years beginning at age 20 and annually after age 40.
- Monthly breast self-examination beginning by age 20.

Hidden Treasures

Sweet healthy escapes for the shopper on the run. Warning: do not try this all at once!

East Hampton's Main Street and Newtown Lane have delights you do not know about, awaiting your taste buds!

On Newtown Lane, Second Nature Health Food Store has an assortment of healthy candy bars, yet my favorite thing to eat there is the naturally grown macadamia nuts (found in back with bagged nuts) eaten with a Fresh Samantha carrot juice or a chocolate soy beverage.

A&P up the block carries Mauna Loa macadamia nuts but they do not taste as fresh as those at Second Nature. However, the Mauna Loa are good with semi-sweet bakers white chocolate bars. And in aisle two, some chocolate soy milk, which can also be found at the A&P.

Next to Second Nature, Dreesen's Market is famous for their plain, cinnamon and powdered donouts. Just buy one or share one half with a friend. And sometimes they have those plump, wet undried figs which I suggest to speed up digestion. Treat yourself to a chocolate milkshake as well. All three of the previously mentioned stores carry the dark green Haas avocados which do wonders for the skin. A few stores down from Dreesen's is a chocolate speciality store, A Little of What You Fancy, which carries Godiva Chocolate Truffles, yet my favorite is the Lindt white chocolate pistachio bar. Across the street on Newtown Lane the Barefoot Contessa and the Golden Pear carry homemade muffins, cakes and pastries. Compare bran muffins, cakes and carrot cakes! The low-fat chocolate cake at Barefoot's is a light yet filling treat and the apple bran muffins at the Pear are filling.

On Main Street, David's cookies and Soup Du Jour both carry ice cream, my favorite ice cream since years ago when Soup Du Jour used to have Sedutto's Butterscoth Praline, or butter pecan; both have that sweet, nutty, creamy flavor. And David's Cookies, which seems to have been around forever now, carries delectable, moist, chewy oatmeal raisin cookies as well as white chocolate chunk macadamia nut cookies (cloud nine!). A few stores down from David's is Nuts About Chocolate, which carries all sorts of sweets: truffles, candy bars, packaged chocolates, jelly beans, etc. What I like, though, is a European hazelnut chocolate bar they carry or the chocolate powder-covered almonds with a bottle of chocolate Arizona soda pop (the bottle is artfully printed with a woman wrapped in an American flag on it).

Next, I'll report on Wainscott and Sag Harbor.

Author's note: Last season, I tried sometimes two or three of the store combinations of food and I not suggest this for anyone as to much sugar can lead to unthoughfulness, forgetfulness and altogether a bad day.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

Using a structure to extend the growing season is not a new technique, The Chinese have used cold frames for millennia. Here on Long Island, the traditional cold frame has been a low wooden enclosure that rests on the ground, topped with a transparent, hinged cover; typically an old glass-paned window.

For the past decade or so, heavy duty plastic stapled to a simple frame of wood strips has become the cold frame of choice for many gardeners. This type of light weight, portable frame is versatile and efficient. Because the sides are translucent plastic, more sunlight, and more warmth pours into the cold frame. The problem is that the plastic loses heat too rapidly for winter crops in cold weather, and the weight of heavy snow can burst the quick-and-easy cold frame completely apart. This type of cold frame can be used to extend the fall growing season or for hardening- off spring seedlings.

But for late winter salads pit cold frames – lined with brick or stacked cinder blocks and build against a sheltered southern wall – hold heat best with the least temperature flucuation. Sinking the frame into the ground eliminates drafts and maximizes the temperature moderating effects of the earth. It's important to have good drainage since the frame lies below ground level. Drainage in poor soils can be improved by adding a layer of gravel about two feet below the surface. Since a concrete foundation can leach minerals into surrounding soil, pH levels should be monitored.

A cold frame is really just a small, simple greenhouse. Its relatively constant warm temerature results from radiant solar energy that has been trapped behind the transparent glass or plastic cover. During the day, the heat builds up inside the enclosed structure and warms both the air and the soil The greenhouse effect works so well, in fact, that the biggest problem with a cold frame is over-heating on a sunny day. Plants can literally be cooked to death, even on a chilly day, unless the cover is opened enough to let in cooling air.

To avoid roller coaster high and low heat levels, many gardeners check the cold frame thermometer regularly and adjust the cover accordingly or install devices that respond to the temperature by automatically opening and closing the lid. Some growers line the inside walls of the cold frame with black-painted jugs of water to hold warmth overnight.

Wind also poses a challenge to the cold frame gardener. Since a strong gust can tear off an open cover or even overturn the frame – spelling disaster for the plants inside, all cold frames must be securely anchored to the ground. Windbreaks, such as hay bales, walls or, better still, the side of a building, will slow winds so that they cannot damage the structure or reduce its inside temperature.

Greens are ideally suited to winter cold frame culture. Many varieties of lettuce, kale, Oriental greens, chicory and endive, and spinach, are good candidates. Cultivars developed by European and Chinese breeders are often described in seed catalogs as winter lettuces or winter salads.

While salad greens can grow inside the cold frame when outside temperatures fall below freezing, extended periods of cold weather force dormancy. In the north, plants stop growing and become quiescent for the coldest eight to ten weeks, roughly from December to February. At that time, organic saladgrowers can put their crop to bed for two months by gradually mulching around and over the plants inside the cold frame, and covering the outside of the frame with an insulating blanket of straw. In February, as the sun grows stronger and the days longer, the cold frame can be uncovered and the mulch gradually removed from around each plant. Fresh salad greens are just a step away.

Remember, growing salad greens in a cold frame requires bold planning and thought. A willingness to experiment coupled with observational powers makes all the difference in cold frame growing. It's a game of high stakes, especially when the temperatures plunge far below zero, but the rewards are great.

ONLINE BANKING: THE EASY OPTION

Are you one of those people who dread the reality of their account balance? With holiday shopping in full swing, the fear is probably warranted. Rather than waiting on an outdated, late-arriving bank account overview to arrive in the mail, why not try online banking? Not only will this option allow you to keep an ever-watchful eye on your dwindling funds, but checkless bill paying, account transfers, and loan applications are just a few of the goodies often available with online banking. Online investing is also available for those looking to turn their computer in a money machine. Read on.

THE RUNDOWN:

www.onlinebankingreport.com- Though a subscription-newsletter, the site provides a free, comprehensive database of net-oriented banks. Search for your perfect match according to the bank's services, location, or service provider. A subscription will grant you access to analyses of online banking trends.

www.gomez.com- "Your guide to buying online," this site boasts scorecards for a variety of markets, including online banking. Simply click on "banks" under "personal finance" and view a list of the top Internet banks for the Fall 2000. Includes a review and ratings of each institution.

www.greenmagazine.com- With the slogan, "this website is about money," how can you go wrong? Offering offbeat information on investing, earning, banking, protecting, and enjoying your loot, greenmagazine.com proves to be a refreshing read in the sometimes dry world of finance.

www.fdic.gov- Whenever considering a new banking institution, it is important to ensure that the bank is FDIC insured. Check out this official site of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to confirm that your choice is legitimate and your deposits insured.

www.onmoney.com- An interactive Financial Manager, this site allows you to maintain, plan, and manage all of your finances from one place. Keep track of your investments, plan for upcoming college tuitions, and pay your bills with onmoney.com.

www.fool.com- A site dedicated to educating, amusing, and enriching the "average Joe" on the world of finance. Whether its information on investing, banking, or buying a house that you are after, the Motley Fool can be counted on for information and enlightenment.

www.investorguide.com- Claiming to be "the only investing site you need," investorguide.com is a one stop resource for business news, stock quotes, market summaries, earnings reports, and much more.

ONLINE BANKS:

Choosing the right online bank is a personal decision. Depending upon your priorities and banking habits, different banks are suitable for different people. While a completely online bank may suit the professional whose employer offers direct deposit paychecks, a waiter may find a conventional bank with online services more convenient. Most large conventional banks have online services for a small monthly fee, check with your branch if interested. See below for a list of commonly recommended Internet-only banking institutions:

POLICE BLOTTER

It wasn't Avon calling. A Three Mile Harbor resident opened his door to a neighbor, who, after an argument, punched him in or near the eye. The neighbor, along with his wife (it was not reported what she did) were arrested.

A liberally redacted police report tells the tale of a well travelled wallet. A woman laid her wallet down on a clothes folding table at East Hampton Laundry. The wallet turned up next by the curb in the parking lot. The man who found it apparently brought it back into the store; the wallet was put in a basket under the front counter. A woman (worker? customer?), when she arrived at the store early in the morning, said she saw someone "going through" the wallet. The owner of the wallet reported over a thousand dollars in cash missing, as well as two bracelets, adding another grand plus to her loss.

Was it the Grinch? Who came out of the closet? A Wainscott woman told police that someone had taken a baby doll dressed in a Santa outfit and a large wax candle from her closet in her rooms. The items had been purchased for Christmas gifts.

* * *

Speaking of the Grinch: on Three Mile Harbor Road someone took holiday lights and decorations from a fence.

* * *

Just before Thanksgiving, a bomb scare in Mattituck turned out to be a propane leak which had occurred at the former Wine Garden Restaurant on Route 48. But before that was ascertained, police had closed a number of roads in the area and evacuated nearby houses and stores.

* * *

A Hampton Bays man was having a bad hair day. He was caught in the act of burglarizing the Showcase Hair salon in that town. James Schmitt got into a scuffle with the officer who tried to arrest him; he was subdued and charged with robbery and resisting arrest. Southampton Town Police Officer Thomas Conway was treated at Southampton Hospital for minor injuries. Another business in the area was robbed that night, but police cannot connect it to Schmitt.

* * *

All I want for Christmas is a...Ford Explorer. A sixteen year old in Hampton Bays got into his uncle's 1998 Ford Explorer, drove about – and rolled it over. The uncle told police the youth had not been given permission to use the vehicle. The doubtless chastened youth was charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in the third degree.

* * *

If they would have only found a place to park.... A Sag Harbor couple was questioned by a police officer when he noted they were parked on private property in Southampton. When they could give no satisfactory explanation as to why they were parked there a search of the car revealed drugs and money: specifically fourteen grams of cocaine and $3,000 in cash.

The King Kullen in Hampton Bays was minus a dozen cases of Heineken on Thanksgiving Day. You need a large overcoat to smuggle that haul outside. If it was not clear how the thief got so much beer out of the store, the police made an arrest in the matter. It was also not known how much of the booty had been consumed by that time.

Dan's LETTERS

A LITTLE HOPE?
Dear Dan,

Question: today I was driving down the street. I saw an old man lying on the side, half in the street. The cars were swerving to miss him.

When I pulled over to the side to see if he needed help, he said he fell and couldn't get up. I helped him up and carried him into the house.

He said he was fine. He said he was raking the leaves and slipped. After I got home my cousin called to say the man possibly broke his hip.

My question to you is, "Has the world gone so bad that people will swerve their cars to miss someone lying in the street, or is there some shred of hope that there may be some people that care?"

I went back to the man's house with my crew and cleaned his leaves so he wouldn't pick up his rake again. Please give me some hope.

800: THE WHOLE ELEPHANT
Dear Dan,

I have been following with great interest Jerry Cimisi's series on the doomed TWA Flight 800, including his latest in your issue of December 1. It seems to me that what probably happened to that plane is a synthesis of all the conflicting evidence.

First, a missile hit the plane and exploded. This sparked the explosion of the fuel tank, followed by two other explosions, probably of a reserve fuel tank and one of the plane's motor (or both motors).

Some such combination of events may resolve the conflicting evidence: like taking the whole elephant, rather than its various parts.

OBFUSCATION AND TREACHERY?
Dear Dan,

Political power tends to corrupt and absolute political power corrupts absolutely.

Voter fraud is rampant in Florida by the Gore team in its determination to steal the presidency from Governor Bush. The seven Democrat judges on the Florida Supreme Court ordered a stay of Secretary of State Harris's legal authority not to accept manual vote re-counts past the seven day statutory deadline of November 14th, and subsequent certification of Bush as president. These seven thieves then allowed the subjective examination of illegal dimpled and disputable ballots to continue in three heavily Democrat counties to insure a Gore victory in violation of the 14th amendment's due process and equal protection clauses. The examination of these votes recounts, ultimately is not to determine a winner, but to work toward a Gore victory. Hundreds of ballot chads seemingly pulled and punched, found on the floors of these boards are mute testimony and evidence of mischief and vote tampering. This whole foul scenario is reminiscent of the Clinton-Gore's policy of obfuscation, treachery, and disregard for the rule of law.

These Democrat examination boards disallowed 1400 military absentee ballots favoring Bush on a 2-1 basis, while the same boards allowed thirty-two ineligible felons to vote for Gore. If we as a nation are to survive, a change in the executive branch is imperative.

Cook Pony Farm Real Estate Expands To The North Fork

Cook Pony Farm Real Estate, Inc., a leader in the real estate market on the South Fork of Long Island for over 55 years, is pleased to announce its expansion to the North Fork. The recent purchase of Lewis Realty Group adds three offices to Cook Pony Farm's seven highly successful South Fork offices, thereby expanding Cook Pony Farm's coverage to the entire East End of Long Island. In acquiring the 50 year old Lewis Realty Group, Cook Pony Farm Real Estate adds offices in Mattituck, Cutchogue and Southold to their string of offices located in Westhampton, Southampton, Bridgehampton, East Hampton, Amagansett, Sag Harbor and Shelter Island. While the final transaction of this important real estate acquisition is expected to close before the end of the year, office renovations and transfer of operations will take place during January of 2001.

This most recent step in expansion is a natural for a firm that has long been involved with real estate transactions on the North Fork. Cook Pony Farm Real Estate has been instrumental in the successful marketing and sale of some of the areas premier wineries; among these are the sale of Hargrave vineyards and Gristina Vineyards. Currently, Cook Pony Farm is the Exclusive Broker for Bidwell Winery and was recently involved in the sale of North Fork farmland intended to be used for additional vineyard operations.

Melanie Ross, President of Cook Pony Farm explained that the newest expansion is in response to customer requests for Cook Pony Farm to assist them with their North Fork real estate transactions. Mrs. Ross and her partners Judi Desiderio and Michael DeSario, are delighted to add that they have recently hired Charlene Cheshire as North Fork Operations Manager. Cheshire, a North Fork native, will be relocating to the area after having spent the last twenty years involved with the real estate industry on the South Fork. According to Cheshire her first mission is to incorporate Cook Pony Farm's cutting edge technology, advertising/marketing strategies, commitment to customer satisfaction and broker support to the Lewis firm. At the same time plans to supplement the respected Lewis staff with additional energetic, team-oriented North Fork professionals is already under way.

Cook Pony Farm Real Estate invites all interested North Fork Real Estate professionals to learn more about the opportunities that Cook Pony Farm will offer them by calling Charlene Cheshire in the East Hampton office at 631-324-9600. The Cook Pony Farm partners have always known that the formula for their success has been in hiring true real estate professionals and giving them all the tools they need to be successful. A proven formula which will undoubtedly continue with this first step into the North Fork market.

According to Cook Pony Farm Vice President, Judi Desiderio, "Cook Pony Farm's North Fork operations will mirror our successful South Fork offices and provide our associates with the best marketing tools and technology available today. This, in turn, will provide optimal services for both buyers and sellers."

A gala welcoming party at a local vineyard is currently being planned for sometime in January for all those involved in this expansion to meet and greet fellow brokers and business associates from all over the North Fork.

There's Just Something About a New House. And there's really a lot about this new one that has just been completed a block from Three Mile Harbor in East Hampton's Northwest area. For example, how about 5 bedrooms and 4 bathrooms; or a glorious custom kitchen; or an enclosed sunporch that is winterized or can be fitted with screens for the Summer season. If that's not enough, how about the heated gunite pool with its own pool cabana. All done in the best of taste. Exclusive. $895,000.
